HOOVER BLASTS ROOSEVELT FOR 'COURTING' WAR

Warns President's Revision Of Foreign Policies Will Provoke Ill Feeling

By The Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Feb. 2—Herbert Hoover declared last night President Roosevelt had announced a "new departure" in foreign policy which would provoke international ill will and possibly lead to war.

The use of coercion, such as economic sanctions, he said, was an integral part of President Roosevelt's proposed expansion of foreign policy, and asserted any form of coercion "is the straight path to war itself."

"No husky nation," said the former president, "will stand such pressures without bloody resistance. Those who think in terms of economic sanctions should also think in terms of war."

'Deluged With War Talk'

Mr. Hoover set forth his views in an address to the Council on Foreign Relations and a nationwide radio audience. Gen. Charles G. Dawes, formerly vice president and ambassador to Great Britain, and many of the city's outstanding business and professional men, were in the visible audience of approximately 800.

At the outset of his speech the former president asserted the nation was "deluged with talk of war," that "our minds are being prepared to accept war as inevitable," but warned that it was necessary to "keep our heads."

Some authoritarian governments, he added, "are making war or are aggressively threatening other nations. The world is taut with fear." But, he added, the dangers to the United States must be appraised cooly, soberly and without partisanship.

Mr. Hoover said the nation willingly would bear the burden of increased armament for national defense but contended the "proper degree" of military preparedness depended upon the nation's foreign policies and the source of its dangers.

Danger Of Attack Dismissed

The speaker dismissed the danger of military attack upon the United States by European and Asiatic dictatorships.

"That any of these dictatorships, whether Japan, Germany, Italy or Russia, or all of them together, have the remotest idea of military attack upon the western hemisphere is sheer hysteria," he said.

"It will be said that we must be prepared to go across the seas and enforce lawful rights for American trade by military action. I do not agree with that thesis. There always comes a time, with patience, when such ends can be accomplished by the processes of peace."

Mr. Hoover said the American people thus far had limited their approval of foreign policies to nonintervention in the affairs of other nations, armament for defense only of the western hemisphere, protection "by force if necessary" of the

FRENCH SEEK BORDER TRUCE IN SPAIN'S WAR

Premier Urges Loyalists To Dig In For New Stand

By The Associated Press.

PERPIGNAN, France, Feb. 2.—French authorities tried today to arrange a "border truce" in northeast Spain as Spanish Premier Juan Negrin urged his government forces to make a new stand against the insurgents.

Informed sources said the French had begun negotiations directly with the Spanish government and indirectly—through Great Britain—with the insurgents to halt the fighting on terms they considered acceptable to both sides.

Their purpose was to prevent Spanish government troops from being driven across the frontier into France by Generalissimo Francisco Franco's drive to the north. France also moved reinforcements to the frontier to block by force, if necessary, a stampede of Spanish government forces into France.

Despite the full backing of the Spanish government parliament (cortes) for continued resistance it was believed that negotiations for the truce depended on the outcome of a battle now raging about midway along the 80-mile line between Barcelona and the French frontier.

Insurgent dispatches reported Franco's offensive was proceeding rapidly up the coast. Insurgents reported the capture of Vich, about 40 miles north of Barcelona, yesterday.

The cortes adjourned early today after a dramatic meeting in an underground chamber of an ancient fort at Figueras, Spain, after unanimously backing Negrin's determination to continue the war "with all its consequences."

HONORED AT CONVENTION

ROBERT T. HALL
Keeps East Liverpool Represented

R. T. HALL NAMED VICE PRESIDENT

Local Man Added To List Of Association's Officers

East Liverpool still was represented today in the executive list of the United States Potters association although custom of elevating members gave the presidency to a Syracuse, N. Y., official and retired a local man from that post.

Pottery manufacturers concluded their two-day convention in Washington Wednesday by electing Robert T. Hall of East Liverpool as third vice president. Mr. Hall is associated in the sales division of the Hall China Co.

The delegates to the 60th annual sessions chose Richard H. Pass as president, replacing W. H. Locke Anderson of East Liverpool.

Hardesty, Ray Elevated

Charles S. Ray of Paden City, W. Va., was elevated to first vice president, and B. D. Hardesty of Beaver Falls stepped up a notch to become second vice president, according to the custom of the association.

Charles F. Goodwin of East Liverpool was reelected to his 26th term as secretary-treasurer. Mr. Goodwin said today on his arrival from the convention that the executive committee has yet to decide the date and place of the 1940 convention and also whether to continue the association's research fellowship at Ohio State university.

The delegates returned pondering the statements of a dozen or more speakers who apparently were unanimous that the new deal's reciprocal trade policy endangers the domestic pottery industry.

Speakers included Mr. Anderson, M. W. Thompson of East Liverpool; F. X. A. Eble of the "Buy American" movement; Sen. Robert Taft, Republican of Ohio; John E. Dowsing, the association's New York tariff counsellor and others. None was more vehement than Mr. Dowsing in assailing the Roosevelt program. His was the concluding talk.

Termed "100 Percent Failure"

Mr. Dowsing declared at the closing session Wednesday the reciprocal trade agreement program is a "100 percent failure." He asserted it has not improved operations of trade and has incalculably injured the domestic industries and labor.

He told the manufacturers Secretary of State Hull and other new deal leaders had "never backed water" in claiming the program had increased dollar value of imports and exports.

He said, however, that in 1934 dutiable imports were $644,842,000 and in 1937 were $1,247,090,000, an increase of 93.4 percent.

Citing further figures to substantiate his charges, he said dutiable imports on which rates of duty were reduced by Mr. Hull in 1934 were $132,702,000 and in 1937, were $255,386,000, an increase of 92.4 percent.

"So the hopes that there would be an increase in dollar value of the imports were unfulfilled," he contended. He added that the 1934 value of exports was $2,100,135,000, and in 1937 was $3,294,916,000, or 56.9 percent increase.

"Instead of increasing the exports greatly or in the same ratio to the increase in imports, Mr. Hull

PRESIDENT, AIDS STUDY FINANCE NEEDS OF ARMY

Conference Called As Clash Over Sale Of U. S. Planes Abroad Grows Bitter

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2 — President Roosevelt called a White House conference on army needs today, amid a crackling dispute on the sale of American-made planes abroad.

Members of the house appropriations subcommittee, which will frame the war department appropriation bill, were there. Louis Johnson, assistant secretary of war, preceded them by a few minutes.

White House officials said Chairman Taylor (D) of Colorado of the house appropriations committee requested the discussion. They added they did not believe the meeting would be as all-inclusive as the secrecy-shrouded gathering of the senate military committee Tuesday.

Sharp Debate Stirred

The Tuesday meeting stirred up sharp debate in congress, punctuated by conflicting views on whether this country's aviation industry could supply the army with 3,000 new planes and fill foreign orders at the same time.

Secretary Morgenthau, who administers the treasury's $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund, denied today it had been used to help France or any other power buy military supplies or merchandise in this country, "directly or indirectly."

Republicans demanded that the senate military committee summon airplane manufacturers to clear up the question of whether army orders and foreign orders both could be handled.

Sen. Austin (R) of Vermont said the five Republican members of the committee wanted first-hand information because this was a vital question in the controversy over proposed sale of the latest type of military planes to France.

The projected sale aroused a stormy debate in the senate yesterday, with critics of the President demanding that he state his foreign policy publicly.

Slowing Up Of Program Seen

An assertion that the domestic armament program would be slowed considerably if planes were sold to France was made by a member of the senate military committee, who declined to be quoted by name.

On the other hand, G. Grant Mason of the Civil Aeronautics Authority was reported to have testified that even if the French purchased 60 light bombers they could obtain delivery long before the army would have funds available for its own new craft.

Sen. Barkley of Kentucky, the Democratic leader, told the senate

HUNGER STRIKE GRIPS SAN QUENTIN PRISON

4,000 Convicts Protest Too Much Corned Beef Hash

By The Associated Press.

SAN QUENTIN, Calif., Feb. 2.—San Quentin prison, largest in the country, was a powder keg today as thousands of ravenous convicts sat idle in their cells, growling complaints about the food they refused to eat.

Several days ago mumbled criticism about too much "corned willie" — corned beef hash — on the prison menu grew into talk of a revolt. Yesterday the hunger strike quickly spread in the overcrowded prison from a few hundred men in the jute mill to nearly 4,000 of the prison's 5,300 inmates.

Warden Court Smith decided to take no chances on permitting massed demonstrations today by the sullen convicts. He announced no one would be permitted to leave his cell unless he first agreed to eat his meals as usual.

The warden stayed in the big prison yard more thon two hours yesterday, talking to groups of the men and urging all who refused their noon meal to go back and eat it. Some of the convicts went back to work without eating, some remained idle, and no attempt was made to force them to the tasks.

Smith said the regular "hash Wednesday" menu was changed yesterday because of the many complaints which had reached his ears and the meal the men refused to eat was spaghetti and meat loaf, pickles, white bread, brown beans and tea.

"That's a very good meal, isn't it?" he added.

20 JAILED AS T-MEN SMASH NARCOTIC RING

By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—Twenty persons were held today for trial as treasury agents questioned scores in their attempts to smash the "most vicious gang of narcotics peddlers in America."

The suspects were rounded up by 40 "T-men" yesterday in a spectacular raid on San Juan hill, an area adjoining West 62nd st., described by agents as a tunnel-infested refuge for criminals rivaling 19th century Chinatown.

Groundhog Didn't See Shadow But Weathermen Doubt It Means Much As Winter Will Rule Regardless

DID you hear the one about the groundhog? Lawrence Copeland, U. S. weather observer at Millport, heard the gag and he said "nertz" in so many words.

W. S. Brotzman, federal weather data collector at Pittsburgh, chimed in with "it's hooey."

And there you are. Those faithful to the groundhog theory of weather prognostication said the critter came out of his hole today, didn't see his shadow because the sky was full of rain instead of sunshine, so spring weather is due.

The chiefs of the fabled Punxsutawney, Pa., Groundhog lodge announced that the woodchuck emerged from his winter hibernation, sniffed at the six-inch snowfall about his burrow, then hustled back, leaping over his shadow as he fled.

Meanwhile, the Ohio weather bureau which doesn't depend on fur-bearing animals of doubtful ancestry for its predictions, said the weather will turn cloudy and colder with rain tonight and that Friday will be fair and colder. The cold turn to the weather is expected to clip any rise the river may make as a result of the rain.

Mr. Copeland said February will mean steady winter with little sub-zero temperatures. He said January had 40 percent sunshine and that weather conditions during the month generally were favorable for the farmer.

There was a total snowfall of 10 inches and on Jan. 30 there was an inch of rain, a boon to the farmers as the supply of water in wells and other sources was getting low despite the snow. This was two inches more snow than fell in January, 1938.

The first two weeks temperature was 11 degrees above normal, while the remainder of January was slightly below normal of 27 degrees average. The average for the month, however, was 3 above the 4-year average. It was one below zero on Jan. 15 and 26 and 61 above on Jan. 5.

Winter began another siege by heaping snow and cold on parts of California and Arizona, stirring up storms on the Great Lakes and pouring snow and rain on the east.

Heavy rains have fallen from eastern Texas northeastward to the lower Ohio valley, while moderate to heavy snows were reported from most of Minnesota and the Dakotas. The nation's major disturbance was over the upper Great Lakes.

Snow in Phoenix, Ariz., was the fifth there in 20 years. Smudge pots

PINBALL LICENSE PLAN OUTLAWED

Supreme Court's Ruling Jolts Proposed Legislation Here

East Liverpool's proposal to license pinball and similar mechanical amusement games was dealt a blow today when the Ohio supreme court ruled that the slots are gambling devices and cities cannot turn them into revenue producers.

Councilman James Welch proposed city licenses for approximately 150 of the mechanical nickel grabbers but so far the measure has never reached councilmanic action.

The action was withheld pending a ruling on the Cleveland case. Attorney Carroll Lynch, city solicitor, ruled in an opinion to council in February, 1938, when the licensing proposal came up, that if games could not be licensed they were illegal and in conflict with the laws of Ohio.

Cleveland Case Aired

Ruling on a suit brought by William J. Krause to enjoin Cleveland officials from placing in operation a city ordinance providing for licensing of various types of machines, the court affirmed a common pleas court order that allowed the restrainer and reversed an appellate court ruling that set aside the injunction.

The decision was unanimous except for Judge William L. Hart, who did not participate because he did not hear the arguments.

"Where the result of a game is determined by the automatic or mechanical operation of a device upon which the game is played, and not subject to the control of the player, it is a result determined by chance," the court held.

At Cleveland Safety Director Eliot Ness said he would allow a "reasonable" time for removal of the machines from business houses.

The supreme court arrived at its decision by reasoning which was explained as follows in the decision:

"However, for a game to constitute gambling, it must be one which is played for a gain or money or a thing of value as the prize or reward.

'Amusement Has Value'

"Amusement is a thing of value. Were it not so it would not be commercialized. The less amusement one receives the less value he receives. Whoever plays the device and receives tokens therefrom receives more value for his nickel, with respect to the amount of amusement obtained than the player who receives non at all.

"However, the number of tokens a player may receive is wholly dependent on chance. Consequently, the amount of amusement a player receives for his nickel, by virtue of the return of the tokens, is dependent wholly upon chance.

"Since amusement has value and added amusement has additional value, and since it is subject to be procurred by chance without payment of additional consideration therefor, there is involved in the game three elements of gambling—namely, chance, price and a prize."

Reversed On Appeal

In September Judge J. S. Hurd's decision was reversed by the court of appeals, by a vote of 2 to 1, with Appellate Judge P. L. A. Leighley dissenting.

In the interest of a speedy final decision, the appellate court cut through red tape and certified the case immediately to the Ohio supreme court, which heard the case in October.

For reasons which have not been explained, the supreme court delayed its decision until yesterday, more than three months after the hearing.

Other decisions by the court included: Ordered Warren G. Townsend reinstated as tax clerk by Joseph Berning, Hamilton county

OHIO BRIDGE TAX IMMUNITY ASKED

Ohio, West Virginia Propose Reciprocal Elimination

Reciprocal elimination of taxes on state-owned bridges is planned by the Ohio and West Virginia bridge commissions, officials of both states announced today after a conference at Charleston.

They said elimination of taxes was desirable but it could not be done immediately because of the sudden financial setback it would give communities where the bridges are located.

They decided to study some system of gradual reduction of the taxes the states have been paying each other.

Ohio owns the Mason City-Pomeroy, Steubenville-Weirton, and East Liverpool-Chester bridges, and West Virginia the Parkersburg Belpre, Marietta-Williamstown, and St. Mary's bridges.

Gov. Homer A. Holt headed the West Virginia officials at the conference, and Ohioans present were: Robert Schiffler, secretary-treasurer and manager of the Ohio bridge commission, Oscar P. Grischy, commission member, and John Turner of the state auditor's office.

Ohio's acquisition of the local bridge means the county will lose about $60,000 of assessable property as the state is expected to apply shortly for exemption.

The county had been taxing the property when privately owned for the approach, the abutment, the toll house and that part over the low water line of the Ohio side of the river. Hancock county received the major share of the bridge taxes.

BURGLARS HERE TAKE $102 IN MERCHANDISE

Glass Cutting Thieves Loot Gratton Confectionery

Burglars cut holes in four panes of glass in the Gratton confectionery on Dresden ave. Wednesday night before gaining entrance through a broken window and stealing merchandise and cash totaling $102.25, police reported today.

The thieves used a glass cutter to make a circular hole in a side window which let them into the ice cream department, then cut a hole in the window of an inside door, but were unable to enter the main room of the building.

On the west side of the building they tried to remove putty from another window, and failing this, cut another pane, but were unable to open the window. They gained entrance by taking out a pane of glass held in place by tire tape.

The loot included tobacco, a small radio and $4.50 in cash. The robbery occurred sometime after the store closed Wednesday night and was discovered early today. Capt. J. Norman McFarland and Patrolman John Richards are investigating.

CONDITION OF BORAH HELD 'SATISFACTORY'

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2. — Sen. William E. Borah of Idaho, ill of grippe in a Washington hospital, was reported this morning to be in a "satisfactory" condition.

A hospital attache said the 73-year-old Republican passed the night without experiencing any material change.

His personal physician said last night there appeared to be no present threat of pneumonia. Borah was stricken with a cold Tuesday.

HOUSE INSISTS UPON MATCHING IN RELIEF BILL

Senate Changes Studied To Make Sure Amendments Don't Nullify Clause

By The Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 2.—Determined to preserve the matching requirement, the Republican leadership in the Ohio house of representatives went over the $5,000,000 temporary poor relief bill with a magnifying glass today before bringing it up for a vote on senate amendments.

It wanted to make sure that the amendments did not nullify a clause requiring the cities and counties to spend a dollar of local funds for each dollar they would receive in state aid.

The amendment particularly scrutinized would recognize the local government's January relief expenditures and encumberances as matching funds. In other words, if a city spent or encumbered $100,000 for relief last month, it would be eligible to apply for a similar amount in state funds.

Rural Bloc Opposition Cited

Speaker William McCulloch, who warned that the rural bloc in the house would go along with no relief bill unless matching was required, wanted to determine if, after January, a city could obtain state grants equal to its monthly relief debt.

He indicated that if the matching clause was not impaired, the house would concur in the senate amendments and send the five-month appropriation measure to Gov. John W. Bricker for his signature.

The Republican leadership of the senate, which passed the bill late yesterday 32 to 2, agreed with city officials that the bill was not satisfactory. The cities contend they have no funds to match the state money.

However, Sen. Frank E. Whittemore, Republican floor leader, said house leaders promised to go along on a bill to appropriate another $1,000,000 or more if the funds in the present measure were found to be inadequate.

Sen. Leo M. Ascherman (R) of Cuyahoga county generally expressed the cities' viewpoint when he declared "this bill is no good to Cuyahoga county as it now stands with the matching requirement."

"We should practice economy," he added, "but we can't feed people on economy."

Amendment Turned Down

He offered an amendment to recognize cities' expenditures for Works Progress Administration and National Youth Administration projects as matching funds, but it was rejected.

The dissenting votes against the bill were cast by Sen. Don R. Thomas (D) of Montgomery county and Tom L. Gallagher (D) of Cuyahoga county.

The bill vests the administrative authority in the state welfare director; empowers the state emergency board to distribute the $5,000,000 and requires counties to set up a central agency for compiling information on every person receiving any form of public assistance.

No provision is made for paying off 1938 relief deficits totaling more than $3,378,000. To cope with this situation, Sen. Richard Milroy (R) of Lucas county introduced a bill which would enable cities to issue 10-year bonds to fund relief deficiencies. No principal payments would be necessary for five years.

The house also turned its attention to means of releasing local funds for relief. It was expected to vote today on bills which would free inheritance and intangible taxes so that they might be spent to aid the indigent.

A bill extending the cigaret tax (one cent on each 10 cigarets) through March 31, 1941, was made ready for the governor's signature after the house concurred in senate amendments, 118 to 8. The measure repeals a clause ear-marking the approximately $7,500,000 a year revenue for the schools.

Two appointments of the governor were confirmed unanimously by the senate. They were Dr. R. H. Markwith of Akron as health director and George C. McConnaughey of Cleveland as public utilities commissioner.

The senate and house planned to adjourn late in the day for the week-end.

A bill which would empower common pleas courts to commit mentally defective criminals to a hospital instead of prison was recommended for passage by the senate judiciary committee. Its author is Sen. Aschermen.

New bills introduced and their authors included:

Providing $4,000 to conservation division for purchase of Starve island in Lake Erie near Put-In-Bay—Rep. Sweeney (D) of Cuyahoga county;

Increasing the permit fee for wine manufacturers from $20 to $100; limiting importation of wine in one month to 40 percent of total purchases and increasing from 51 percent to 60 the amount of Ohio wine required in blending—Sen. Baumhart (R) of Erie county;

To change name of state industrial relations department to department of labor—Rep. Stokes (R) of Fairfield county;

To permit specific charges to grand jury in investigation of "bucket shop" operations — Rep. Kirkpatrick (R) of Knox county.

'CLEAN UP OR GET OUT'

WARDEN J. C. WOODARD
'Conditions Not As Bad As Painted'

HOUSE WILL VOTE WIDER DIES QUIZ

Small Group, However, Acts To Block Extension

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.— House approval of continuing the Dies investigation of un-American activities was regarded on Capitol Hill today as a foregone conclusion.

But as the rules committee was finishing hearings preparatory to floor debate, a small group of representatives was making every effort to prevent a favorable vote.

Representatives Keller (D) of Illinois and Dingell (D) of Michigan criticized the conduct of the Dies inquiry to the rules committee yesterday, contending there were political motives behind the hearings last summer.

Dingell declared the testimony had blackened the character of Atty. Gen. Frank Murphy. Keller said the testimony had defeated Murphy for reelection as governor of Michigan and otherwise had assisted the Republican party in Minnesota and California.

Dies Clashes With Witnesses

Rep. Dies (D) of Texas clashed frequently with the witnesses, asking them to "keep the record straight" and not repeat hearsay statements.

Two witnesses asked the Dies "to stand aside" and permit creation of a new committee which would start a new investigation of un-American activities. Dies indicated his refusal to consider this suggestion and his work was upheld by several rules committee members, including Rep. Cox (D) of Georgia.

"This country is behind the Dies committee. If you don't think so read the thousands of letters of approval pouring in upon it," Cox told Rep. McGranery, (D) of Pennsylvania.

Meanwhile the house directed its attention again to the $725,000,000 relief bill which bumped into one last obstacle—a demand by southerners that congress wipe out some of WPA's wage differentials.

An amendment by Rep. Tarver (D) of Georgia, would bar wage differentials of more than 25 percent for the same type of work in different regions.

Compromise Refused

The senate rejected the amendment and refused even to compromise on it. Should the house again back Tarver's proposal, the bill would have to return to a joint senate-house committee. Otherwise, the senate is through with the measure, having approved yesterday modified restrictions on use of relief money for political purposes.

ROOSEVELT'S JUDGE CHOICE DISAPPROVED

Glass, Byrd Lead Committee Attack Upon Roberts

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—Administration critics declared today the senate would support its judiciary committee in disapproving appointment of Judge Floyd H. Roberts to be a federal judge in Virginia.

Before the committee voted 15 to 3 yesterday to recommend rejection of Roberts, Sen. Glass (D) of Virginia had attacked his selection as "personally offensive" and Sen. Byrd (D) of Virginia had called it "personally obnoxious."

Chairman Ashurst said it was the first time since 1913 that a presidential appointee had been so vigorously opposed by both senators from the state involved.

Other veterans said they could not recall any instance in recent years in which a nomination had been confirmed over the protest of both senators.

Baby Dies As Home Burns

HARVEYSBURG, O., Feb. 2.—A stove explosion caused a fire last night in which Nellie Gunion, one-year-old, died when the flames destroyed the two-room Gunion home. The child's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Gunion, were away at the time. Two other children escaped.

DEPUTY, GUARD OUSTERS LOOM IN PEN CLEANUP

Warden Opens Investigation Of Drug, Liquor Traffic On Orders Of Director

By The Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 2.—There were indications today that a shakeup in the guard personnel and perhaps the removal of Deputy Warden August Ptak might result from an investigation of Ohio penitentiary ordered by Welfare Director Charles L. Sherwood.

Warden James C. Woodard was instructed to clean up what Sherwood described as an illicit traffic in drugs and liquor or lose his job. Sherwood said that he also was not satisfied with the cooperation Woodard had received from Ptak.

Both Woodard and Ptak, named to their positions by former Gov. Martin L. Davey, are under civil service and unless they resigned it would be necessary to file ouster charges with the civil service commission to remove them.

Ptak has general charge of operations inside the walls of the century-old prison.

Bricker Gives Support

Sherwood indicated that there would be some guard changes because of information he had received that some of them were involved in the bootleg traffic. He was represented in the investigation by William F. Amrine, superintendent of corrections.

Gov. John W. Bricker said that the investigation order had not come from his office, but that Sherwood "has my staunch support."

While Woodard and Amrine conferred this morning, more than a half dozen prisoners were called from their cells to the warden's office, presumably to be interviewed concerning Sherwood's charges.

"It's too early yet to say anything about the investigation," Woodard said. "So far we have found no evidence that the reports (concerning drug and liquor traffic) are true."

Amrine said he had been assigned to cooperate with the warden.

The director told Woodard during a conference late yesterday that the "mess" must be cleaned up or he would lose his job.

"I have definite evidence of the traffic," Sherwood declared later. "This is not reflection upon the integrity of Warden Woodard, and I have complete confidence that he will be able to clean up the mess."

Sherwood said the warden was "heartily in accord" with the investigation, although he did not believe conditions to be "as bad as painted." Amrine attended yesterday's conference.

Not only did the drug and liquor traffic exist, Sherwood said he had learned, but special favors were being purchased by some convicts "from guards who are not loyal to their warden."

Wants Discipline Strengthened

"It will be necessary to strengthen materially the discipline for guards and convicts as well as stamp out the illegal traffic," he added.

Information given him in affidavits and statements by former and present employes of the prison led to his demand for a cleanup, Sherwood said, adding he had discussed the matter earlier with Woodard.

The investigation, another of a series involving the prison, was demanded four years to the day after Woodard was named warden by former Gov. Martin L. Davey.

In January, 1935, Davey initiated a senate investigation of the prison and lodged charges of maladministration against Warden Preston E. Thomas. During a hearing on the ouster proceedings, Thomas resigned and the charges were dropped. On Feb. 1, Davey promoted Woodard from deputy warden to warden.

Current reports that Amrine would succeed Woodard should the warden be ousted were termed conjecture by Sherwood.

"I am not after Woodard's job," the director said.

Sherwood said that Amrine also would check on conditions at other state penal institutions, but that from information available now there were no situations as "unsavory" as at the penitentiary.

SOVIET AND JAPANESE TROOPS CLASH ANEW

By The Associated Press.

TOKYO, Feb. 2. — Domei (Japanese news agency) reported today from Hsinking, capital of Manchukuo, that a Manchukuo garrison had killed five Soviet Russian soldiers and wounded three in a clash 60 miles northeast of Manchuli.

(Manchuli, on the northwest border of Manchukuo, is that point at which the railroad across Siberia reaches Manchukuo.)

Domei said officials had protested to the Soviet consulate at Harbin.

The agency said authorities reported a force of 100 Russians had crossed the frontier but that the Manchukuo force suffered no casualties.

Bombers Take 11 Lives

MADRID, Feb. 2—Eleven persons were killed and 27 injured today when five Savoia (Italian) bombers raided Valencia, dropping about 100 bombs.

VICTORY LOOMS IN FIGHT TO CURB RIVER POLLUTION

New Legislation Introduced Meets Objections Cited In Roosevelt Veto

(Following is the first of a series of stories on stream pollution control).

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2. — Sponsors of stream pollution control predicted today they would be able to obtain passage of legislation during this session of congress that President Roosevelt would find satisfactory.

The President vetoed a bill passed last year authorizing the creation of a division of pollution control in the public health service. He objected to failure to provide presidential review of proposed grants to combat pollution of rivers.

Meet Roosevelt Objections

Already, bills have been introduced in the house and senate designed to meet Mr. Roosevelt's objections and interested members of both branches said they expected early consideration.

In the house, Representatives Spence of Kentucky, Parsons of Illinois and Bland of Virginia all Democrats, have submitted bills, and Sen. Barkley (D) of Kentucky, the senate majority leader, has offered a companion measure to the Spence bill.

Barkley and Spence received assurances from the President when he visited the Ohio valley last year that he would support a new stream pollution bill if his objections were met.

In addition, Sen. Taft (R) of Ohio said he believed congress would pass a measure that would receive the President's approval. Representatives Hess and Elston, also Cincinnati Republicans, indicated they would back the Barkley-Spence bill.

Group To Weigh Legislation

Attaches of the house rivers and harbors committee said stream pollution would be the first piece of business before that group. Because of numerous hearings in the last four years, they said that if any hearings were held, they would be brief and for the purpose of acquainting new committee members with the problem.

Senate commerce committee spokesmen doubted that group would hold hearings, because it also has voluminous testimony in its records.

Hess and Elston had planned to collaborate on a bill, but when they learned the Barkley-Vinson bill represented the desires of the stream pollution committee of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, they decided to support it instead.

Taft, a member of the chamber's stream pollution committee, said he had conferred with Sen. Donahey (D) of Ohio, who is on the commerce committee, in an attempt to obtain early action.

Death Turns Tables

France's High Executioner, Who Took Lives of 300 Men, Dies After Collapse In Subway

By The Associated Press.

PARIS, Feb. 2.—Anatole Deibler, 57-year-old hereditary high executioner of France, died suddenly today.

The aged "Monsieur De Paris," whose family has given France her executioners since the revolution, collapsed in a subway station on the outskirts of Paris and died shortly after he reached a hospital.

Deibler had executed more than 300 men on the guillotine since he inherited the office from his father, Louis Deibler, just before the end of the last century.

He kept entirely to himself, his family and a close circle of friends.

Always in traveling about France with his three assistants he used a private train compartment, the shades of which he usually kept drawn. Invariably he traveled under an assumed name.

For many years one of Deibler's great sorrows was that no one in the family was willing to take over the functions of executioner. In 1936, however, he persuaded his nephew, Andre Obrecht, to accept the responsibility of keeping the job in the family.

DEATH TAKES FORMER REFORMATORY LEADER

By The Associated Press.

MARYSVILLE, O., Feb. 2. — Friends received word today of the sudden death yesterday of Mrs. L. M. Mittendorf, former superintendent of the Ohio reformatory for women here, at her home in Sarasota, Fla. No details were known.

Mrs. Mittendorf left here for the south shortly after she resigned in December, 1935, the position she held for 20 years. Her resignation was preceded by charges of "deplorable conditions" made by a welfare department food inspector, who later was dismissed, and a public denial by Mrs. Mittendorf that she had "made a deal" with former Gov. Martin L. Davey for her resignation.

Mrs. Marguerite Reilly of Cleveland was named superintendent of the reformatory to succeed Mrs. Mittendorf.

City's Civic Leaders Rally Behind 'Go To Church' Movement

BUSINESS and labor leaders, school authorities, service clubs and women's organizations—people prominent in the community's life—joined today in a strong indorsement of the "go to church" movement which reaches a climax with "go to church" day Sunday.

Expressing accurately the sentiment of the layman were statements from T. H. Fisher, president of the First National bank; James M. Duffy, president of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters; Thomas Cartwright, president of Trades and Labor council; H. G. Means, superintendent of schools; G. A. Beck, principal of the high school; Paul Hutchman, president of the Rotary club; Clayton G. Horn, president of the Kiwanis club; Albert I. McLean, president of the Lions club, and Mrs. Helen Chandler, president of the East Liverpool Federation of Women's Clubs.

These spokesmen not only expressed approval of the drive but cited benefits that would accrue from close church association and, in some cases, drew comparisons that showed the churchgoer less likely to become involved in serious cases of discipline or moral laxity.

The statements:

MR. CARTWRIGHT—"I heartily indorse the 'go to church' movement. It is significant that as church attendance has decreased in this country in recent years that this nation's crime bill has increased proportionally. America needs to 'return to religion,' and I firmly believe that there can be no effective return without our regular attendance at church."

MR. FISHER—"A better investment could not be made for the present or future than to affiliate yourself with a Christian church. Without church and its influence, there would be no hope in this world of a future life, eternal, to be spent in heaven. Support the church with your attendance, your influence and finance. The church needs you, and you need the church."

MRS. CHANDLER—"The idea of a 'go to church' Sunday is one that the East Liverpool City Federation of Women's Clubs and each of its 380 members heartily indorses. As Samuel Johnson said: 'To be of no church is dangerous, because if we do not attend church, any church, religion will glide by degrees out of the mind.'"

MR. DUFFY—"I most heartily indorse the 'go to church' movement because I am sure this practice is beneficial to the individual, as well as to the community at large. Everyone realizes the benefit of physical exercise and training to the body; in the same sense spiritual exercises, such as mental contemplation and reflection are beneficial to the well being of man.

"Attendance at church, where the proper atmosphere can be found, naturally affords more opportunity for the full attainment of spiritual benefit. Tranquility of mind and heart makes for individual efficiency in any problem. Certainly, in the matter of one's daily task, there is no substitute for communion with God."

MR. HUTCHMAN—"With regard to the question of church attendance, I am of the opinion that in attending church a person is subjected to the influence of those ideas and beliefs which are at the present time, and have been in all stages of human history, one of the main sources of inspiration to humanity and a vital factor in man's progress toward a higher state of civilization.

"In the press of daily affairs, one's attention is so generally occupied with the business at hand that he is unable to devote sufficient time to a contemplation of the faith and ideals which alone give meaning and purpose to our daily activities. Were it not for the opportunity afforded by the churches for religious worship at stated intervals, this necessary part of our experience, in all probability, would fall into a bad state of neglect.

"In church attendance, not only is the individual worshipper greatly benefited, but by his presence he aids in maintaining that institution which, more than any other, serves to keep alive in human experience the concept of God, and to perpetuate principles of right living and proper conduct toward our fellow men, which are the foundation of our social organization."

MR. MEANS—"The greatest bulwark against Communism, Fascism and other isms that tend to destroy freedom of worship as well as all other forms of freedom is the crowded church on the Lord's day.

"It is my firm conviction that every man, woman, and child who is old enough to reason for himself will accept the above statement as a stalwart truth. Let us then accept the personal invitation that has gone out to every home and wend out ways to our various churches Sunday morning, Feb. 5.

"Many years of active public service have brought under my observation both parents and children from all kinds of homes. My problems have not come from the homes of God-fearing, churchgoing people, but from those homes where religion is scarcely known or grossly neglected. Loyalty to the Master means loyalty to man.

"We dare not suppose that the home and the Sunday school and the church and kindred organizations will suffice to keep the individual loyal to the true, the beautiful and the good. There are so many evil forces at work. Satan has too many training schools abroad in the community to make this business of establishing loyalties in the heart a mere matter of drifting and wishing. No matter what one's upbringing may be he has to fight the world and the flesh and the devil if he would remain true. There are assassins of character at every street corner. The agencies I have mentioned are indispensable in the building of a strong life, but no matter how heavily you dot the community with good homes and good schools you cannot omit the Sunday school and the church for there are agencies of the opposite sort to tear down. Vigilance is the price of loyalty to the truth. Absence from church and Sunday school is certainly not productive of better citizenship. Joshua 24:15, says—'As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord.'

"We find in the teachings of Jesus an attitude toward children which is inspiring, uplifting and constructive. Jesus said, 'Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of God.' Here is more than a gesture! There is a personal touch here which has laid the foundation, regardless of what philosophies others may write, of true educational philosophy."

MR. HORN—"The 'go to church' movement has the moral support of every Kiwanian, and more than that, it is the membership's purpose to lend active assistance in the future to insure continued momentum to a drive so admirably begun. The full effect of the current reawakening of church consciousness cannot be determined immediately. The real benefits will be evidenced in the years to come, but it is essential now, at the very outset, to endow the program that it will not fall short of its goal."

MR. McLAIN—"I am pleased to add my personal indorsement to the 'go to church' movement. I sincerely hope that every church in our city will be filled to capacity next Sunday morning as a result of this campaign. By our regular attendance at church each Sunday, we can help to make East Liverpool a better community in which to live. We need the churches and the churches need us."

MR. BECK—"One of the most constructive campaigns in the history of this community is, without doubt, the present Sunday school-church attendance program.

"I feel so positive about this thing because of the many associations with young people which I have had over a period of years. These associations include those of a very fine type and those of a most unpleasant character. It is rare, indeed, that an individual who maintains a close association with church and Sunday school becomes involved in a serious case of discipline, or moral laxity. In the majority of cases such difficulties are traceable to conditions of the home which are not those associated with church and practical religion.

"Participation in religious activity does not of necessity guarantee school academic success. I do believe, however, that clear minds and clean bodies contribute materially and positively to the success of young people, in and out of school. These things the church can and does develop.

"When we wish to protect our property against disaster we exercise all reasonable precautions and then purchase an insurance policy. I can think of no better insurance against the breakdown of young lives than a full participation policy taken out with a church and Sunday school in this or any community."

OHIOAN CALMLY GOES TO CHAIR FOR SLAYING

Cline Saunters Into Death Chamber Unconcernedly

By The Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 2.—Almost as calm as if he were walking along a street, John William Cline of West Elkton sauntered into the death chamber of Ohio penitentiary last night and was executed for the slaying of Aaron Laubach, Hamilton policeman.

Hands pushed into his pockets, the 24-year-old former steel worker strolled unconcernedly into the little white room and ignored guards and witnesses as he was strapped fast. He was pronounced dead at 8:09 p. m.

Laubach was slain Jan. 27, 1938, as he guarded a gasoline station. Chester Francis, 19-year-old brother-in-law of Cline who waited outside the station, also was indicted for first degree murder but a jury recommendation of mercy made his sentence life imprisonment.

Heeding a recommendation by the state parole board, Gov. John W. Bricker refused yesterday to commute Cline's death sentence to life.

Warden James C. Woodard of Ohio penitentiary said Cline received the news calmly.

"He asked me if anything else would be done for him," Woodard reported.

"I told him I couldn't answer that. He spent most of the afternoon talking with his wife, his father, Daniel Cline, and a sister-in-law."

The second district court of appeals yesterday set for March 6 the execution date of Harry and Henry Dingledine, father and son of Springfield, who were convicted of slaying two police officers during a gun battle at Crystal Lake in 1937.

SHERIFF MAY INSTALL CENTRAL POLICE RADIO

Special To The Review.

LISBON, Feb. 2—Installation of a central radio station at the county jail connecting all parts of the county in a two-way hookup is under consideration by county authorities as a means to combat crime.

The plan has the indorsement of Sheriff Harry Gosney and is being considered by the county commissioners. With two-way radios already in use by the Wellsville police department and a similar system planned in East Liverpool, authorities believe the smaller communities will benefit.

GRANGE HEAD SPEAKS AT OHIO FARM RALLY

By The Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 2.—Observing a day set aside for their organization, members of the National Grange attended sessions at Ohio State university's farmers' week today. Headlining the program was a speech by Louis J. Taber, grange master.

Ohio farmers yesterday heard Dr. L. R. Edminster of Washington, special assistant to Secretary of State Cordell Hull, declare that "the trade-agreements program as a whole is fundamentally in the interest of the overwhelming majority, if not all, of the farmers in this country."

He said benefits included safeguarding and expanding the foreign market outlets for farm products, increasing buying power of workers in American cities because of reopened outlets for factory products and reducing tariffs on many articles farmers buy.

Howard Taylor, Lexington High school senior, won first place in the vocational agriculture public speaking contest last night.

Highway Patrol Conducts 'Retraining' School

By The Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 2.—A highway patrolman jumps into a motorcycle sidecar and takes aim with a high-powered rifle at the weaving outline of an automobile.

Crack—the gun spits its charge of death.

But no one gets hurt and it's all part of the Ohio highway patrol's "retraining" school, which is being conducted for 32 officers at the patrol's state fairgrounds encampment.

Training in pistol, rifle and machine gun handling is a principal part of the two-week course and the firing range presents a novel arrangement of targets.

To give patrolmen a firing position as near to actual conditions as possible, they must sit in a motorcycle sidecar and lean to the right to shoot around a barricade, that's almost the same as leaning out of an automobile window and firing.

The target is an outline of the rear of an automobile containing two passengers and is equivalent to a motor car traveling at a distance of 100 yards in front of the patrolmen. A special mechanism makes it appear like an automobile weaving on the highway.

Col. Lynn Black, patrol superintendent, said that the course would be conducted in two-week periods until all patrol members are brought up to date on the latest court rulings and laws relating to traffic and crime prevention.

Here's the curriculum:

Criminal law study, 12 hours; criminal procedure and evidence, 12 hours; accident investigation, 8 hours; foot drill, 12 hours; motorcycle formation riding, 8 hours; scientific examination of evidence, 4 hours; powdering and lifting fingerprints, 3 hours; the mechanics of making an arrest, 2 hours; proper method of searching a suspect, 2 hours; proper method of using handcuffs, 1 hour; fire arms instruction, 18 hours; crime scene investigations, 3 hours; general criminal investigation, 6 hours; departmental instructions, 2 hours; laws regulating arrest, 3 hours; first aid, 10 hours; the science of self defense, 10 hours; and proper approach to motorist, 2 hours.

State May Be Asked To Keep Up Wellsville Grave Of Gen. Riley

THE state legislature may be asked to establish a trust fund for the maintenance of the grave of Gen. James W. Riley, Civil war veteran who is buried in St. Elizabeth cemetery at Wellsville.

Gen. Riley was a commissioned officer with the Union forces during the Civil war. A native of Wellsville, he began the practice of law and also engaged in the banking business following his return from the service. He accumulated considerable wealth before his death and when he died Nov. 7, 1905, he left no will and apparently no close relatives.

Persons who claimed to bear relationship to the general appeared by the dozens for a share of the big estate. Relatives from Ireland visited Columbiana county to present their claims, but none could satisfy the court of blood relationship.

Finally, after years of litigation, the estate reverted to the state and county but considerable of it was used for court costs and attorney fees. The county's portion was divided among the schools and with this money the Salem board of education purchased its athletic field which it named in honor of Gen. Riley.

The grave has been cared for during these many years by the cemetery sexton. Every Decoration day his grave is marked by an American flag. However, no flowers have been provided.

Rev. Fr. Thomas Ring, pastor of the Immaculate Conception Catholic church, believes that some fund has been set aside by the courts for the maintenance of this grave, and that it was placed in a local banking institution.

He is investigating this report. However, if no fund is available, the priest may seek to have the state assist in the care of the grave. He points out that inasmuch as a large share of his money went to the state, it would be only fair that the government provide funds to perpetuate the veteran's memory.

LIONS CLUB TOLD DOCTORS OPPOSE SOCIAL MEDICINE

Dr. Fraser Says U. S. Plans Would Be Inefficient And Care Inadequate

Members of the medical profession are opposed to government control of businesses or their profession, Dr. John Fraser, local physician, told members of the Lions club at the Mary Patterson memorial Wednesday noon.

Dr. Fraser listed many objections to opposed plans of compulsory medical insurance and government control of the profession, which he said would be inefficient and unable to give adequate medical care.

He pointed out that many ills are imaginary and that vast sums of public money would be spent on patients with mental quirks or who were too lazy to work and were using false ill health as a way out.

Indictment Termed 'Politics'

"The recent indictment of the American Medical association," he said, "was a political move to put the association in a bad light by brain trusters who were getting ready to spend vast sums for socialized medicine."

He quoted Dr. Charles Gordon Hay of New York, who declared that if compulsory health insurance were started here it would be the greatest change in the practice of medicine since the days of Hypocrates.

Dr. Fraser stated that under the plan doctors would become cogs in a government machine and patients would be assigned to doctors instead of making their own choice.

He related the great difficulties now in treating relief and WPA patients, where the patient has to bring in five forms to be filled out and the doctor must wait months for the approval of treatment and payment of his bills.

To show the inefficiency of this, he related how one patient had his tonsils removed in September and was certified for work in October, but in January the physician received a notice that if he would certify complete recovery for the man, he would be considered for further WPA work.

The speaker also attacked the government estimate of 40,000,000 people in the country not getting medical care. This was arrived at, he said, by taking a total of all institutional patients and added to an estimate of the people who just don't visit a doctor in a year anyhow.

Health Generally Better

He gave statistics to show that life expectancy, infant mortality and general health were improving in Ohio and throughout the country and urged his hearers to consider the value of this system before discarding it for an untried one.

Dr. Fraser estimated that compulsory insurance at 10 cents a day would cost the nation four billion dollars yearly, or six percent of a normal national income.

He pointed out that the average family spends more on automobiles, tobacco and amusements than it does for doctor bills.

"Before the government goes off on any wild schemes, why doesn't it stamp out quacks and bad patent medicines?" he asked. He recommended that the government make use of private hospitals, often half empty, before it spent millions of the public moneys on its own hospitals, and finally, that if economic conditions were cleared up it would do a lot more good than inferior temporary medical aid for national health.

President A. I. McLain announced that the Pontiac team was leading in the attendance contest. He called a meeting of the board of directors for Monday night at 6:15 in the office of Harry Brokaw.

'One-Fire' Ware Skyrocketed Hall's To Fame

—By LUCILLE T. COX—

THE Hall China Co. once was regarded by other East Liverpool potteries as a "freak shop."

Started in 1903 by Robert Hall Sr., the little plant at East Fourth and Walnut sts., seemed doomed to failure. Mr. Hall died in 1904 and his son, Robert Hall Jr., took charge.

By adopting strict economy measures the firm was able to keep one step ahead of bankruptcy. Once the profit for a year was less than $100.

The daily output never exceeded two dozen bed pans or similar pieces. Money was so scarce that a number of times the plant was able only to meet its payroll, leaving nothing for repairs or reserve capital.

On Decoration day, 1910, the plant was closed down for the holiday. That night when the watchman reported for duty, he discovered the shop had been entered. The sliphouse equipment lay in ruins. Engine belts hung slashed to ribbons, the pug mill was torn apart and scattered throughout the shop, the silk lawns of the slip sifters were cut and riddled in a dozen different directions.

This vandalism proved a serious blow to the firm. It meant a loss of $3,000 and a complete shutdown of the plant, throwing 60 men out of work.

IT required courage on the part of Robert Hall to reopen his pottery. But he did, and in addition he determined to put into practice a new idea he had been formulating. It dealt with a "one-fire" product.

Mr. Hall and his superintendent spent long hours of careful experimenting with glaze mixtures before they finished enough pieces of ware to fire the "small kiln" with their new product. The news spread over the town and other potters gathered to see the drawing of the ware. They were, on the whole, extremely skeptical.

The two men standing before the kiln, on the day of drawing, were not concerned with the criticism or the incredulity of their visitors. Their faces gave evidence of long hours spent on the experiment and their anxiety as to its success. Mr. Hall laid his hand on his superintendent's shoulder:

"If this kiln of ware is a failure, we will close up the shop."

The superintendent nodded his head in reply. He knew only too well that the future of the Hall China Co. hung on the success or failure of the ware in the kiln.

But the results were amazing, beyond their most sanguine expectations. The pieces of ware nearest the hottest point of the kiln were almost perfect. It was no longer a question of formula but regulation and even distribution of heat in the kiln.

When F. I. Simmers, then a salesman, saw the ware he told Mr. Hall emphatically: "I can sell ware like that if you can continue to make it."

IN a few months the daily output jumped from two dozen to 16 dozen pieces of ware. The entire U. S. Pottery industry was watching the activities at Hall's with interest.

In 1914 the war in Europe closed the foreign markets and there was an immediate demand for a substitute made in the United States for hotel utensils formerly made in Europe.

Samples for reproduction began to arrive. The models were made of porous stoneware and had absorbed and retained the odors of the food cooked in them to such a degree that many of the samples were nauseating to the workmen, who were to cast patterns from submitted pieces of ware. They were duplicated in smooth, heat holding vitrified insets and the acceptance was enthusiastic, to put it mildly. The firm became swamped with orders and flooded with new samples. Calls for coffee urns, casseroles and teapots were received and the Hall China Co., living up to its boast, produced a substitute for virtually every model sent it.

At the convention of the United States Potters association in Washington, D. C., in 1927, one of the delegates declared that Hall's teapots were becoming as familiar as "Tetley's Tea."

The story of the Hall China Co., is one of initiative, courage and ability. The present modern pottery is a monument to Robert Hall Jr. and his "one-fire" product.

Battle Against Opium

CHUNKING, China—The Chinese government has unanimously decided that, despite the present war, every effort must be made to exterminate the opium evil throughout China. The spokesman of the executive Yuan revealed that the cabinet had approved a program for the complete supression of opium in Szechuen province during 1938.

MOTORIST LUCKY IN CRASH

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — Herman R. Borck, 45, hopes to keep well from now on while motoring. Stricken ill while driving his automobile, Borck lost control of his car. It struck an oncoming machine, then caromed into two parked cars. Borch was injured only slightly.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

NIGHT COUGHING CAN OFTEN BE PREVENTED

If your child often coughs at night because of even a slight cold—do this at bedtime: Thoroughly massage Vicks VapoRub on throat, chest, and back. VapoRub's poultice-vapor action tends to keep the air-passages clear, helping to maintain normal breathing through the nose, and so reducing mouth-breathing (the frequent cause of night coughs). Try it tonight—learn for yourself another reason why VapoRub is a family standby in more homes than all other medications of its kind put together.

Advice And Consent

RESENTFUL murmurs among senators concerning secrecy in the conduct of foreign relations are signs of a very old issue in United States government being warmed up again.

The Constitution says the chief executive "shall have power by and with the advice and consent of the senate to make treaties, provided two thirds of the senators present concur . . ."

Senators, properly, are jealous of the authority this gives their branch of congress. Presidents traditionally have demanded the right to take the initiative in foreign policy matters.

Between a formal treaty and an informal understanding there is a no man's land of authority where the struggle between the senate and chief executives takes place. Senators today, alarmed lest President Roosevelt's impetuosity lead to commitments which they would not want to indorse, have special reason to remind him early in the complicated game of foreign policy which circumstances have brought about that they intend to keep close check on what is being done. Their position will be supported by popular opinion.

Turning To Books

THERE is no doubt some significance in the fact that the Carnegie library circulated 26,796 more books in the depression year of 1938 than in the more prosperous year of 1937.

This increase may have been due to a better presentation of reading material on the part of the library management so that more people were more interested in more books than ever before. A hasty recapitulation of the year fails to recall any outstanding best sellers or any plethora of literary world beaters, although new books are being published at the rate of 10,000 a year in America.

But it seems a little more reasonable to believe that the increase may have come because people have more time to read and less money to spend. The use of library books is free, as is the use of the reading rooms, which entertained 22,274 more people last year.

If this is true it indicates little more than that these many people were bored and took one of the easiest escapes into the fanciful world of books.

On the other hand, knowing the excellent selection of books of all kinds in the East Liverpool public library, it is easy to imagine that the 26,796 were a little more enriched and made a little happier by their reading, which, while being one of the easiest forms of diversion, is also one of the most profitable.

Retreat

COURAGE may be needed for retreating as well as standing firm, especially when a point of honor is involved. Resignation of Martin T. Manton, senior judge of the United States circuit court of appeals in the second circuit, could not have been an easy decision to make, whatever the circumstances may be.

Judge Manton is under fire. His affairs are being investigated by federal, state and county authorities. According to Thomas E. Dewey, district attorney of New York county, the jurist has received money from litigants before his court.

Judge Manton has affirmed his innocence. One of the top ranking jurists in the country, he naturally is jealous of his good name. His resignation, he explains, is to maintain the people's confidence in his court, not to protect himself.

By resigning he has forestalled possible impeachment proceedings, but if subsequent investigation of his affairs reveals nothing irregular in his conduct his decision to retreat under fire will be the act of a courageous man. The federal judiciary enjoys popular confidence. It would be a shock to learn that Judge Manton had betrayed that confidence.

Interlude

FOR a change from talk about preparations to civilize the world with guns it's pleasant to learn that things are beginning to buzz in baseball camps.

Hundreds of the country's stoutest young men soon will be in training at these camps to shell one another's ears off with base hits when the battle starts.

They are bent on doing or dying, and they will be well paid for their trouble. The thing that makes it possible, of course, is the tremendous urge in something like three out of five Americans to see a baseball game. War games leave them cold.

It's silly, they admit. They've always had a hunch, though, that if their world weary cousins in the old world had learned to play baseball—and football—when they were kids more of them could look forward to a pleasant old age than is possible under existing circumstances.

Signs

IN spite of rumblings of war, heavy snowfalls, stirrings among groundhogs anticipating spring, threadbare radio gags, futuristic hats for women, chicken pox and the common cold, this is a steadily improving world.

The first lady of the United States feted movie stars in the White House (that's what the story said was happening, at any rate). The picture that went with this bit of information showed 10 Hollywood personages and a presidential secretary all stretched out on the floor in comfortable positions.

Mrs. Roosevelt was in the middle, sitting on her feet, the way the Girl Scouts do when resting. It's one of the brightest signs that things are going to come out all right anyone could wish for. It shows the American people, following the first lady's example, are getting down to fundamentals again.

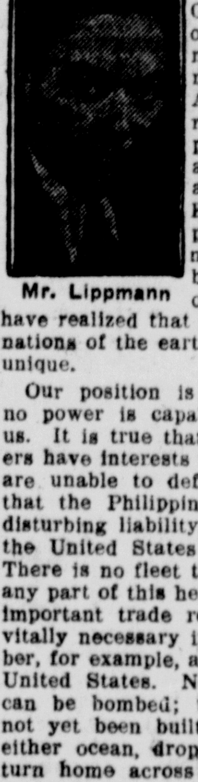
America Faces Two Choices On Foreign Policy; We Must Make One And Stick To It For Security

By WALTER LIPPMANN



Mr. Lippmann

IF THE American people understood thoroughly how exceptionally fortunate is their position in the world, there could not, I am convinced, be any serious division of opinion among responsible men about the aims of American policy. All the questions which trouble us, whether it be the fortification of Guam, the extent of the commitments we should make in South America, or the refusal to let Japan buy planes and the encouragement to France to buy planes, or the neutrality act, can be made clear only to those who have realized that among the great nations of the earth our position is unique.

Our position is unique because no power is capable of attacking us. It is true that American traders have interests in China that we are unable to defend. It is true that the Philippines are a rather disturbing liability. But otherwise the United States is invulnerable. There is no fleet that can threaten any part of this hemisphere, or any important trade route over which vitally necessary imports, like rubber, for example, are carried to the United States. No American city can be bombed; the planes have not yet been built that can cross either ocean, drop bombs, and return home across the ocean. No nation has an air base within striking distance of our own territory, or even of this hemisphere, and no nation would be free to attack us through the air, even if it wanted to, because in both Asia and Europe all the nations are pinned down by their potential enemies.

This gives us a security which is unique. Where other nations may feel that they could beat off an attack if they were challenged, we are able to feel that we cannot even be challenged.

Does it follow that the whole object of American foreign policy must be to preserve this unique security? Is there anyone who will dispute that? Is this not the touchstone by which every question of foreign policy and of armaments must be decided? I feel sure that in the last analysis it is the preservation of this invulnerable security that Americans are primarily interested in and not in the China trade, not in any quixotic desire to uphold treaties that the Europeans and the Asiatics are breaking or abandoning, not in their ideological sympathy, not in cultural or ancestral memories and certainly not in any imperial ambition of their own.

IF THEY could feel that the security we now enjoy will last, there would be no need to do anything further about armaments or to reexamine the lines of our foreign policy. And whatever we do in the matter of armaments and of foreign policy will, I believe, have the support of the whole nation if it is clearly and unmistakably done to maintain this situation in which no one can attack us and no one can intimidate us.

What is the actual situation which we wish to maintain? We have a navy, a very good navy, a navy quite capable of defending our coasts and our vital maritime highways in the Pacific ocean. That means not only that the Japanese cannot attack Alaska or Hawaii, or Panama or the Pacific coast, but that they cannot cut off our absolutely essential imports of rubber from the East Indias. This same navy could easily defend the Atlantic coast, the Panama Canal and South America against any conceivable attack from Europe.

But, and this but is the crux of our whole problem today, the navy is not capable of defending all these things in both oceans at the same time. If the fleet had to defend our interests in the Atlantic, it would not be able to defend our interests in the Pacific; and vice versa, if it were protecting the Pacific, it could not defend the Atlantic. Therefore, if ever the time came when there was a combination of powers against us in the two oceans, we should be very insecure indeed.

Such a combination does not now exist. It is true that Japan Germany and Italy are allies. But their alliance is directed not against us but against China and Russia. As long as that is the case, as long as this alliance has such formidable opposition in Europe and Asia, our ancient security, our invulnerable isolation between the two oceans, remains and we are very safe.

The only fundamental difference of opinion that exists among Americans, say between men like Senators Taft and Clark on the one hand, the President and Mr. Hull on the other, is whether we may continue to count upon this situation continuing.

The difference is not a matter of emotion, of being hysterical or not being hysterial. It is a matter of a sober calculation of what is going to happen. If the Japanese not only conquer China but make China a vassal and an ally; if the Germans and Italians should overwhelm the French army and the British navy, is it not evident that our position in the world would be radically altered? For then the Japanese would be free to set out to conquor not only the Phillippines but the East Indies, the Germans and Italians would be able to obtain naval and air bases on the Atlantic ocean, in Spain, in the Portuguese Islands, in the Danish Islands, in the African colonies. This has not yet happened. The Japanese are still occupied in China; the French army and the British navy, are still able to hold Germany in the center of Europe and Italy in the interior of the Mediterranean sea. As long as this continues, we still have our invulnerable isolation. There is no combination of powers in the two oceans that can threaten us.

WE have two choices, and the critical problem of our foreign policy is to decide which is the better choice. The one is to wait and see, and then if the Japanese succeed in Asia and the Germans and Italians overwhelm the British and French in Europe, to take what ever measures we then think necessary to build a navy which can defend our interest in both oceans at once. This, so far as I understand it, is the policy of a man like Sen. Clark.

It is a possible policy. It may be that the dangers which so many fear will not develop, that Hitler will not try to become the master of Europe, that he will not trouble us in this hemisphere if he does, or that the British and French will be able to hold him safely within bounds. It may be that one ought not to try to look ahead and prepare for possible dangers that may never become actual ones. But granting all that for the sake of the argument, it cannot be denied, I think, that if the worst happened in Europe and in Asia, we should have to build a much greater navy, that is to say a two-ocean navy.

The other course is to take measures to forestall the development of a situation that would really threaten us. That is why the navy wants to fortify Guam. It is the cheapest way of enabling the fleet to pro-

Capital Capers

By PRESTON GROVER

THIS is a democratic city, of course, but—In New York City, John D. Rockefeller was walking by the new building going up at Rockefeller Center and like any good steam-shovel watcher, stopped to watch the work. A foreman hustled him along, whereupon Rockefeller created the "Sidewalk Superintendents' Club" and provided it a sheltered walk where all could stop for a few moments in comfort and watch the digging. Several times daily a report is displayed showing the amount of dirt removed and giving heaps of other information necessary to proper functioning of "sidewalk superintendents."

Now in Washington the government is building a huge memorial to Thomas Jefferson, greatest apostle of democracy. And scorch our soul if they haven't built a high board fence around the works. If this paradoxical situation indicates anything sinister, we don't know what it is.

TO keep you further posted on what goes on in this city we must report that two lads, aged about eight, have opened a free burial service for animals in Rock Creek park in good smelling distance of fashionable Shoreham and Wardman Park hotels, not to mention how close it is to apartment houses where you can't let your dog out without having him sniff at a senator.

The boys have been going for several days now and have a dozen or more graves, each carefully marked. They bury dogs, canaries, cats, pet mice, or anything else except fish. They are very practical about fish and not the slightest bit sentimental, as they seem to be about other house pets.

"Just throw fish outside," they advise, "and they disappear."

They call for dead pets in a little wagon, but business even with such inducements is not especially brisk and now they display a sign near the graveyard advertising the service and giving their home telephone number. There is no charge whatever. There very definitely is a law against burying animals in Rock Creek park, which is the city's pride and joy, but the law hasn't caught up yet with the two lads.

THEN there was the plight of three senators, Minton of Indiana, Schwellenbach of Washington and Truman of Missouri, all Democrats, who were invited over to Vice President Garner's office.

Arriving, they found the door locked, so knocked. No answer. Again and again they knocked, politely of course. Still no answer. Even western senators are not cantankerous enough to pound on the vice president's door. They were no end perplexed and on the point of leaving when Schwellenbach went to a wall telephone nearby and called Garner's number. Soon a door was opened. Garner and his staff were huddled about a radio in an inner room listening to a Texas sports broadcast.

At the time of the appointment to the Supreme Court of Justice Black, former Alabama senator, and Justice Reed, former solicitor general, there was a wealth of comment about the relative qualifications of the two for the bench. Black had much the worst of it.

Reporters regularly covering the court now say that Justice Black's opinions are clear and understandable for quick, concise reporting, while Reed's are a miracle of obscurity, at least from a layman's standpoint. Some suggest Reed may be handling more difficult cases, or at least they seem more difficult.

There's A Population Problem

By Ernest Minor Patterson

President, American Academy Of Political And Social Sciences

THERE is a reason why we keep hearing about schemes for helping the aged. Changes have come in the United States and in many countries — changes which have largely escaped public attention.

In 1810 the number of births a 1,000 persons was 54.3. Since then the decline has been continuous. The rate had fallen to 20.1 in 1930. The League of Nations Statistical Year Book gives the figure as 16.6 for 1936.

At the same time the death rate was declining, until it was estimated at 11.5 a 1,000 persons in 1936. There still is a difference, births in 1936 being greater by 5.1 than deaths. It looks as though population in the United States still were increasing.

But annoying persons not content to accept judgment without analysis point out another set of facts. They remind us there is a change in age distribution. They say that in 1820 about 18.5 percent of the population was under 5 years of age and about 58 percent was under 20. In 1930, only 9.3 percent was under 5 and only 38.8 was under 20.

TO this they did add that in 1920 only 12.2 percent of the population had reached or passed 45, but that in 1920 the corresponding percentage was 22.9.

The decline in the birth rate is to some a trend to be combatted in every possible way; to others it is evidence or perhaps cause of higher living standards and more foresight. We are not concerned with these views. There are other pressing items arising out of the changes.

One viewpoint is that of the businessman whose calculations about the future must be adjusted. He may no longer assume the rate of increase of population that formerly prevailed. Death rates cannot remain low for an indefinite period. As more and more people become old the number of deaths a 1,000 will increase, for scientists have not learned how to prolong life indefinitely. If birth rates remain as low as they are now, it will not be long until death rates will be higher than birth rates and our population will actually diminish.

INSTEAD of selling the same kinds of goods to larger numbers of people, gains in the future must come from selling more goods to each person—a very different matter. This adds force to the importance of high purchasing power of the masses of the population if business is to avoid a decline. Incidentally, too, there will be a relative decline in the potential market for articles desired by the young and an increase in the articles desired by those advanced in years.

There is also a public problem and it is pressing on us. As these changes in "age distribution" come, there will be a smaller percentage of the population in the years of greatest economic productivity —20 to 45—upon whom we must rely for active work. The percentage of those beyond the years of greatest productivity will increase and their support must be assumed by the rest.

This helps to explain the growing demand for old age pensions and the increasing number of thoughtful persons who are supporting the movement.

Particular proposals may be fantastic—as in the Townsend plan—but to label them as such does not meet the issue. We have a public problem due to the growing number of persons of advanced years, many of whom will not be cared for by private means. The question to be answered is not whether they exist but how we are going to care for them.

Farm Income

THE average farm family in 1938 received $71.72 through government benefits, compared with $52.79 in 1937, $41.18 in 1936, $83.67 in 1935, and $79.87 in 1934, according to an analysis of rural buying power made by Northwestern National Life Insurance Co.

Total cash income for an average farm family in 1938 was $1,094, compared with $1,237 in 1937, and $1,140 in 1936. In spite of low prices received for farm products last year, the analysis shows farm buying power was only 6.9 percent less than in 1937, most prosperous agricultural year since 1929. Larger crops were marketed, government benefits were greater, and the cost of things farmers buy was 5 percent less.

The average family also took $179 worth of produce off its farm for its own use in 1938, which, added to the cash income gives a gross income of $1,273 a family.

Ohio Anecdotes

WHEN an editor walks across the country that's news. However, that is precisely what Charles Fletcher Lummis did. Editor of the Chillicothe Scioto Gazette from 1882 to 1884, he started on a 3,507-mile transcontinental tramp in September, 1884, "for recreation and observation."

Enroute he broke his arm in an Arizona canyon and, after setting the bone himself, continued on his way. On the day after his arrival in California, he entered the employ of the Los Angeles Times, serving as city editor until 1887.

While in California, he became actively interested in the Spanish relics of the southwest, and was the founder of the Landmarks club, which had for its object the marking of historical sites. The author of several books, the one which describes his Chillicothe-to-California jaunt afoot has the prosaic title, "A Tramp Across the Continent."

Ethel Makes Sure Joe Understands How She Feels About Brooklyn, The Home Town Of Turp Family

By DAMON RUNYON

Mr. Joe Turp Writes From Brooklyn:

DEAR SIR: The other night my wife Ethel was reading the paper and she ses Joe do you know what? I ses see here Ethel why do you always start out to say something by asking me a question? She ses why Joe what question did I ask you? I ses Ethel you just this minute ses Joe do you know what.

Ethel ses why Joe that is not a question at all. That is just to get you to notice me so I can tell you something. I ses do you mean to say it is not a question when you holler out Joe do you know what? Ethel ses certainly that is not a question, it is just a way of starting a conversation.

I ses well Ethel go ahead and start your conversation and she ses Joe do you know Brooklyn is all right? I ses I suppose that is not a question either? She ses why of course not Joe. It is just telling you something. I ses well you asked me if I know Brooklyn is all right and if that is not a question I would like to know what is.

Ethel ses O Joe I guess you are not feeling so good this evening and I ses I feel good enough and she ses well then do you know it? I ses do I know what? She ses do you know Brooklyn is all right? I ses of course I know it. I ses I have been telling you all along that it is the all rightest place in the whole world but how did you come to think of it yourself all of a sudden? I ses the last time I heard you say something about Brooklyn it was to knock everything and everybody in it.

ETHEL ses yes but I guess I was just mad over something. I do not even remember what I ses. I ses well you ses plenty. I ses you ses if you had your way you would not be found dead in Brooklyn. Ethel ses O I remember that now but I take it all back. Brooklyn is all right. I ses well there is no use in you making your apologies to me. I ses you better make them to Mayor LaGuardia.

Then I ses Ethel you have not told me yet what has happened to make you think of that and she ses well Joe I have been reading about the most terrible things that are happening in other places. That is what made me think of it. Joe do you know there are places in the world where if I went out walking like I do here in Brooklyn somebody would drop a bomb on me and blow me to little pieces?

I ses yes I know that and Ethel ses do you know there are places where they tell you how you have to live? I ses who tells you? She ses whoever is the dictator tells you. She ses that is why Brooklyn is all right. Nobody tells me how I have to live and nobody drops bombs on me.

I ses well Ethel it is the same way everywhere else in this country and she ses I do not know anything about anywhere else in this country Joe but I know about Brooklyn and it is all right. I would not live anywhere else in the world. Even my Uncle Ben ses Brooklyn is all right.

I SES well I guess Brooklyn will be glad to hear your Uncle Ben thinks it is all right. I ses what has become of that revolution he was talking about the last time he was over here? I ses has he postponed it or what?

Ethel ses O Joe Uncle Ben does not want to see any revolution since he got that job working for the city. Uncle Ben ses a revolution would upset things in Brooklyn and he ses there is no sense in doing that. He ses Brooklyn is all right the way it is. Uncle Ben is very happy Joe because all he has to do is walk around and see that some other fellows do their work right.

I ses does your pops think Brooklyn is all right too Ethel? She ses why of course he does Joe. You know very well my pops always thinks Brooklyn is all right. He ses Brooklyn is all righter than any other place in this whole world and so does my moms because she does not know about any other place.

I ses well now thats fine. I ses since everybody thinks Brooklyn is all right there is nothing for us to worry about so if you will get your hat and coat I will take you to see a picture.

Ethel ses I will be with you right away Joe and just think we do not have to sit there in the movies shivering and shaking for fear somebody is going to drop a bomb on us like they do in those other places. Brooklyn is all right Joe.

I ses you can say it again Ethel and she ses all right Joe I will say it again. Brooklyn is all right.

Yours truly,
Joe Turp.

The Romance Of Eating

By Truman Twill

IT'S the Japanese who're supposed to have gone farthest in applying imagination to the practical process of eating. They've made up a lot of perfectly silly stories about the romance of food.

They can't hold a stalk of celery to the chatter which goes on around the dining room table of millions of American homes. Their imaginations haven't even sprouted yet.

Do they know that a pile of spinach is a hay cock and that under it is Little Boy Blue fast asleep, so now we'll eat all the spinach and find the little dope?

Do they know that by drinking a yummy glass of milk clear down to the bottom they can grow as much as three inches at a sitting, and that this can be done over and over again as an example to children too distracted to wonder why papa always scoots down in his chair before he starts to grow?

Do they know the story of the great big railroad engine which couldn't go till a lot of coal was put into it and how the mashed potatoes are going to be the coal and the little boy's mouth is going to be the engine, so open wide, etc.?

Has it occurred to them that Santa Claus keeps a sharp lookout for people who leave things on their plates, and that the Easter bunny would feel mighty bad if he knew all those carrots were going to waste because he loves carrots and never gets enough of them.

Have they mastered the knack of keeping up a running fire of nonsense talk about everything which pops into their heads in order to convey a fixed quantity of strained vegetables into the digestive tract of a baby whose single idea is to throw the stuff on the floor?

Can they imitate train whistles, steamboat whistles fire engine sirens, automobile horns, cows, horses, sheep, Snow White, the Old Woman Who Lived In A Shoe, Peter the Pumpkin Eater, Little Bo Peep, and a score of lesser public enemies at will for the purpose of convincing a child that eating really is a lot of fun and should be engaged in more aggressively?

We doubt it.

An authority asserts that speeches without humor are just as effective as speeches with jokes and quips. Our experience is that they are the same thing. — St. Louis Star-Times.

CHURCH, SCOUTS FOUND ANTIDOTE TO DELINQUENCY

4-H Clubs Also Counteract Anti-Social Tendencies In Young, Judge Reveals

Special To The Review.

LISBON, Feb. 2.—Church work, scouting and 4-H clubs were recommended as antidotes for juvenile delinquency in a report prepared by Juvenile Judge H. W. Hammond for the period from Feb. 9, 1933, to July 9, 1938.

The report characterized church work as a positive guarantee against delinquency. During the reported period 3,500 delinquent and problem boys and girls were contacted by the office, the judge states.

"Not one church worker was found in the group," he added.

Only five offenders were Boy Scouts, according to the report. One was a first class scout, another a second class and three were tenderfeet.' No delinquencies were found among girl scouts or 4-H club members.

Intemperance and immorality in parents were main causes of juvenile delinquency. Excessive drinking in the homes accounted for 290 delinquencies. The number of offenders from broken homes was listed at 165. Shiftless parents accounted for 133 cases and over-indulgent parents, 67 cases.

One hundred and five boys and 70 girls were committed to industrial homes during the period. Another 174 were sent home on probation. There were 237 boys and 144 girls made wards of the court.

Theft was the most frequent type of delinquency, involving 129 boys and five girls. Ranking next were sex offenses with 35 boys and 76 girls.

Other offenses included: Truancy, 35; runaways, 30; ungovernable disposition, 57; personal injury one; mischief-destruction of property, eight; begging on streets, two; drunkenness, three.

Two hundred and twelve of the delinquents were between 12 and 16; 139 between 16 and 18; 28 between nine and 12 and two between six and nine. Ten boys and 10 girls were parole violators.

One hundred and thirty-seven delinquents were from East Liverpool, 36 from Salem, 76 from Wellsville and 25 from East Palestine. Offenders from smaller communities included 45 from Lisbon, 19 from Leetonia, 10 from Columbiana; nine from Salineville and 24 from smaller villages.

BOARD OF TRADE TO ELECT FEB. 13

Wellsville Mayor Sponsors Citywide Commerce Unit

Organization of the Wellsville Board of Trade will be completed at a meeting in the council chamber of the city hall Monday, Feb. 13, at 7 p. m., Mayor Howard L. Kelley, sponsor, said today.

At this meeting a nominating committee will report a slate of officers, including a president, vice president, secretary-treasurer and nine members of the executive board. The nominating committee consists of Dr. C. J. Maxwell, Charles Piatt and Wilbur MacLean.

In the meantime a membership campaign will be conducted among merchants, professional men, manufacturers and others interested in the organization. Dues will be 50 cents a month.

At a luncheon meeting of about 35 business and professional men in the Jones restaurant Wednesday, the constitution and amended by-laws were read and adopted. The report was made by S. E. Daw, superintendent of schools. With Mr. Daw on this committee were Dr. Maxwell and Charles Piatt.

The proposed board of trade will perform the same functions usually handled by chambers of commerce in other cities. It will work in civic movements and will seek to establish new industries and give service to those already operating within the city.

The four offices of the board will be elected for one year. Three members of the executive committee will be elected for three years, three for two years and three for one year.

By this plan there will be six hold-over members of the board each year to assist the new members. Officers also will be members of this committee. By the terms of the by-laws no member of the executive committee may succeed himself.

Triangle Enmeshes Bing

BING CROSBY is the focal point of the eternal triangle plot of "Paris Honeymoon," complicated romantic musical now showing at the Columbia theater.

This time the monarch of croon has an acting job on his hands instead of plugging songs as in his other pictures.

Bing, as a young American gold miner; Franciska Gaal, as a young Balkan peasant girl, and Shirley Ross as a divorcee in search of her next spouse, head the cast with Edward Everett Horton as Bing's gentleman's gentleman and Akim Tamiroff as the real estate dealer who claims to sign his customer "on the spotted line" in one minute.

Bing is on the point of committing matrimony with the divorcee, Miss Ross, only to discover that she has childishly forgotten to obtain a divorce from her last husband, a Frenchman.

During the divorce proceedings in Paris, Bing buys a castle from the realty agent, Mr. Tamiroff, and moves to Pushtalnick, where his castle is situated "in 80 acres of roses," according to Mr. Tamiroff.

The annual rose festival is in progress, and the crooner becomes rather involved with the village belle, Miss Gaal. When Bing leaves for Paris to see his intended, he finds the unquenchable Miss Gaal in the rumble seat of his Cord, which makes matters rather unconventional when the car breaks down and they spend the night in an old house.

At their return to the castle they find Miss Ross present with a suspicious gleam in her eye and a cold welcome. On the night of the annual rose festival ball, Miss Gaal gives the other woman a slug of the most powerful alcoholic distillation ever conceived and hijacks Bing into taking her to the affair.

Matters reach a climax when the angry Miss Ross awakens with a phenomenal hangover and starts a beautiful squabble to decide who is to marry Bing.

Comedy, although rather of a slapstick nature, is sprinkled lavishly through the proceedings with Tamiroff, Ben Blue and Horton each doing his share. Blue as the village half-wit of Pushtalnick hits the mayor's slot machine, described as "America's life, liberty and pursuit of happiness," for a tidy sum and is sold the job of chief of police for the bucketful of hard cash he collects.

Four songs by Bing headline the musical part of the bill. They are: "You're a Sweet Little Headache," "I Have Eyes," "Those Funny Old Hills" and "Joobali."

To complete the bill there is a cartoon, "Always Kickin';" a short, "Rube Goldberg's Travelgab," and a newsreel.—R. F. P.

Murder At Chan's Door

A challenge to Chan in his own home town!

That's the case Earl Derr Biggers' famous sleuth faces in "Charlie Chan in Honolulu," current attraction at the State theater, when a killer dares strike in the Pacific island city—almost, as it were, on Chan's very doorstep.

With Sidney Toler playing the Chan role for the first time, the mystery swiftly gets under way—and the sleuth finds he is matching wits with a wily, ruthless murderer, who even goes so far, as to make an attempt on Chan's life.

Toller contributes an excellent performance, confirming the reports of the Hollywood preview audience. Featured in the surrounding cast are Phyllis Brooks, Sen Yung, Eddie Collins, John King, Claire Dodd, George Zucco, Robert Barrat and Marc Lawrence.

Gracie Fields' own inimitable style of putting over a song is again delighting firm audiences in the second feature, "Smiling Along" merry musical production.

England's queen of comedy, who won the hearts of American screen fans in "We're Going To Be Rich," sings seven numbers in her latest film, which revolves around the adventures of a poverty-stricken little band of strolling entertainers.

A musical program designed to make the most of Gracie's vocal versatility includes "Swing Your Way to Happiness" and "Giddy Up," two tuneful new hits by Harry Parr-Davies, Gracie's own accompanist. Contrasted with these gay, modern numbers, are Fred Weatherley's "The Holy City" and "May Morning." "You've Got To Be Smart in the Army" is a rousing comedy drill number by Leslie Elliot, while "Peace of Mind" is a tuneful ballad by Gerald Paul.

SCOUT TROOP FORMED FOR WELLSVILLE BOYS

A new Boy Scout troop, sponsored by the Immaculate Conception Catholic church of Wellsville, received its charter at a ceremony in the Knights of Columbus hall Wednesday at 7 p. m. Membership-cards were presented.

The presentations were made by Charles E. Felton of Lisbon, county Scout executive, and Lewis Moore, Scout commissioner. Troop leaders are J. R. again failed in fulfillment of his dreams as the imports increased 93.4 percent and the exports but 56.9."

Charges Paper Concessions

He told the convention "it is well known that in anticipation of the United States passing the reciprocal act, months before the act was passed as well as subsequent to the passage, foreign governments raised their tariffs to higher levels so as to have that leeway in trading and thus reduce them back to normal and in reality make only paper concessions.

"Further, no concessions have been made by any other country in removing the quotas, to stabilize exchange and removal of other barriers to the freer exchange of trade.

"While in one or two instances there has been a lessening of the quota requirements, 31 foreign states — the principal commerce states—have the exchange controls and other limitations. For these reasons, the concessions made by the foreign countries are but paper concessions only."

He revealed that the agreement with Great Britain alone contained 444 separate rates of duty in which reductions were made, bringing the total to 1,054 in all agreements.

In the pottery industry, he said the approximate reduction in rate of duty on plates was 35.8 percent and on cups and saucers, 33.6 percent.

He charged that six hearings on treaties given the domestic interests are "merely window dressing."

"Undoubtedly, in the round table discussion and negotiation the differences in demands of the United States and the country being dealt with are composed, and the whole thing is cut and dried by the time the letter of the law is complied with and public hearings held.

'Star Chamber Sessions'

"There treaties are promulgated regardless of opposition, and when the bureaucrats in secret and star chamber proceedings have decided to do a certain thing, all efforts to change them are useless," he charged.

"This administration," he continued, "is unique amongst the governments of the world in its failure to protect its own industries and labor.

"You know, of course, of the low prices of Japanese goods of all types and descriptions in comparison with the domestic prices for similar or identical goods, but I wonder if you do know that imported goods are being sold here at prices so low that even our state prisons cannot compete."

He declared "there is no more effective method to destroy confidence in representative government than to force our people into competition with the poorly clothed, undernourished, ill-housed and regimented workingmen and women of backward states or nations."

He said "if the new deal program is not stopped it will logically lead to the disasterous end where stands dictatorship," and concluded with the prediction "although imports from Japan and Germany decreased, an embargo is justified against them and it is not at all improbable that the President will take action any day."

National Scout Safety Expert To Instruct On New Program

Leaders, Troop Committees To Receive Instruction On Latest Measures

Boy Scout leaders of Columbiana county council will receive instructions Feb. 6 and 7 in the health and safety program recently promoted all over the nation by the National Council of Boy Scouts.

William E. Lawrence, assistant national director of health and safety, will speak at a dinner meeting in the Wick hotel in Lisbon Monday. Members of the executive board of the county council and local health and safety committees for 1939 will attend.

Tuesday Mr. Lawrence, with the aid of five Scouts, will demonstrate the latest safety measures for boys in play, work and hiking in the Lisbon High school building.

This meeting will be for Scout leaders, troop committee members and older boy leaders. He also will plan a program for the organization of emergency Scout units for cooperation with the Red Cross in case of disaster.

Mr. Lawrence is well qualified to present the subject to Scout leaders. He is an Eagle Scout, former Scout master and camp leader. He has served as an assistant Scout executive at Syracuse, N. Y., and as executive at Geneva, N. Y.

He is a lay instructor in the American Red Cross first-aid corps, examiner for the Red Cross life-saving corps, and director of the National Boy Scout aquatic school.

lives of Americans who are of necessity abroad, international cooperation to promote peace and prosperity and prohibition of the sale of arms to nations at war.

Cites 'Momentous Change'

"Mr. Roosevelt now proposes to expand these policies," he said. "The sum total of this proposal is that we make effective protests at acts of aggression against sister nations. He says we must use methods stronger than words and short of war. He asks for armament to back his extensions."

The speaker termed this a momentous change in American policies of peace and war and asserted the European democracies "have accepted it as a complete change of national policy by the United States."

The former president, declaring the nation's first purpose was to maintain liberty in America, said "a war to save liberty would probably destroy liberty." Therefore he averred, the nation should consider the possible consequences of using force "beyond protection of the western hemisphere."

"Personal liberty and free economic life are not built for modern war," he said. "A great war today is a mobilization of the whole people. That means democracy must temporarily surrender to dictatorship, no matter what one may call it, in order that we may bend our full energies to war. It means that our country must be mobilized into practically a Fascist state. It would be so organized."

Hitler's Own Newspaper Joins Attack On Roosevelt

By The Associated Press.

BERLIN, Feb. 2.—Chancellor Hitler's own newspaper, Voelkischer Beobachter, joined in the Nazi press attack today against President Roosevelt for what was interpreted here to be a pledge to back European democracies in defense against Fascist states.

Hitler's newspaper said of the President's discussion on defense with the senate military affairs committee on Tuesday:

"At Roosevelt's behest, North America is about to lose its head for the second time" (referring to American entry in the World war.)

"Is Roosevelt's threat the people's answer to the fuehrer's will to peace?"

Some Berlin morning newspapers carried excerpts of former President Hoover's address in Chicago, but an official spokesman said it was too early now to comment.

Centering on President Roosevelt's closed conference with the senate committee, the Boersenzeitung charged that the President was "a great democratic champion of Bolshevism" who had not "recovered from his exasperation over the peaceful tendency of the Munich agreement."

The paper asserted "he wants to force France and England to drop their policy of understanding with Germany and Italy."

The officially inspired German news agency, DNB, declared that "millions of decent Americans are demanding an investigation into these affairs which, if they had not been inspired by the White House, would be branded as high treason."

The Morgenpost declared editorially that "if Roosevelt's policy is continued, the world must regard the United States as no longer a neutral factor but as having adopted a policy of meddling with affairs that do not concern it."

beclouded the citrus belt as growers fought the frost menace.

Six inches of snow tied up 600 automobiles on an inland highway between Los Angeles and San Francisco. Temperatures dropped to nearly 10 degrees below freezing.

Warmer temperatures were forecast for the west tonight.

Sharp winds drifted the snow in some sections of Minnesota where the mercury ranged between zero and 10 above, but was falling. In North Dakota, Minot's 10 below was the lowest.

Snow in New York was expected to shift to rain later today. Temperatures were in the upper 30's and the maximum forecast was 40, 10 above normal.

3 COUNTY YOUTHS GET TERMS IN U. S PRISON

Judge Paul Jones in Cleveland imposed federal penitentiary sentences today on three Columbiana county youths who pleaded guilty to robbing a Salem postal sub-station of $85 cash last Dec. 22, and to slugging Miss Geneva Whinnery, 19, an acting postmistress.

Alva Stoffer, 20, was sentenced to 25 years; Glenwood Yeagley, 22, and Ernest De Palma, 20, received 10-year terms.

Stoffer, who lived near Salem, and De Palma, of Malvern, were arrested by Salem substation highway patrolmen four days after the robbery, and Yeagley, resident of Moultrie, voluntarily surrendered on Dec. 28 after the former two linked his name to the crime.

Miss Whinnery said one of the men grabbed her as she locked up, beat her over the head with a gun and fled with the postal receipts box. He got in a car with two other men and they sped away.

U.S. CITIZENS WARNED TO FLEE BATTLE AREA

Japan Cautions Consuls Before New Drive

By The Associated Press.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 2.—Japanese warned foreign consuls today they planned an immediate offensive against Lushan mountain and advised that the estimated 65 foreigners there be evacuated before Feb. 10.

The foreigners, including more than a dozen Americans, are at Kuling, Chinese summer resort on top of the mountain, which is 14 miles south of Kiukiang, Yangtze river port below Hankow.

The Japanese offered to aid in the evacuation and warned that the foreigners who remained would do so at "their own risk since the Japanese cannot be responsible for damages or injuries."

The Japanese spokesman estimated the foreigners at Kuling included 37 British, 12 Americans, nine Germans and seven of other nationalities. Associated Press files in Shanghai list names and addresses of 18 Americans believed to be in Kuling.

The note to foreign consuls left the foreigners to make their own arrangements with the 4,000 or 5,000 Chinese guerillas entrenched on the mountain.

Japanese forces already encircled Lushan with outposts aprpoximately halfway up the mountainside.

Reports from three widely-separated points within the Japanese army's far-flung front lines told of bitter fighting between Japanese forces and Chinese irregulars, illustrating the continuation of vigorous Chinese resistance in supposedly conquered areas.

BULLET HELPS SNAKE BITE

BRISBANE, Australia — A new chapter in emergency medical aid was written by James O'Brien, 15, here. While hunting, he was bitten in the arm by a poisonous brown snake. Having no knife with which to scarify the wound, he promptly fired a pea-rifle bullet into it, hurried home where his mother sucked out the poison, and then went to the hospital, where he rapidly recovered.

tect American vital interests in the Pacific without constructing many more warships. That is why the President has helped France to buy airplanes. If France has enough airplanes, the chances of her being destroyed and conquered are very small. That is why he would like to return to the old rules of neutrality. If it were clear now that the British and French could get arms here, the chances of war in Europe would be materially reduced. For Britain and France will not be attacked unless it appears that they are sure to be defeated.

There are risks in this policy. There are the risks of entanglement. There are the risks of reprisal. The question is whether the risks of trying to make war less likely are as grave as would be the consequences of a war in which the British navy and the French army might be defeated, and could no longer keep Germany and Italy out of the Atlantic ocean.

In weighing the two policies, let us remember this cardinal consideration. It will be better to adopt either one and follow it out resolutely, than to hesitate and to quarrel among ourselves. If we want to wait and see refusing all support to the British and French, then, if they fall, we must be prepared to arm ourselves on a standard of naval defense, not in one ocean as now, but in the two oceans simultaneously. If we want to avoid that, and yet to preserve the security we now enjoy, then we should let the British and French obtain arms in this country.

It is a hard choice. But this is a hard time in the affairs of mankind. Either choice is possible. Both involve risks. But not to make the choice clearly and promptly and unanimously is much more dangerous than either policy in itself. For if we do a little of the one and a little of the other, we shall incur all the dangers and get none of the advantages.

We shall become in the midst of one of the great crises of history a divided people incapable of maintaining our vital interests. So I say, let us realize what is the vital interest on which the nation is at bottom really agreed, let us choose now how we mean to maintain it, and having chosen our line, let us hew to that line resolutely and loyally.

Invisible Contact Lens For Eye Can Be Ground To Fit

Eyeball Spectacles Found Entirely Efficient And Practical For Most

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

IN answer to several inquiries, let me say that the so-called invisible spectacles are practical and efficient and are recommended by competent oculists.

Invisible spectacles are shell-like cups of glass that fit over the eyeball. Another term for them is contact lenses. Certain kinds of ocular defects are better corrected with these than with ordinary spectacles. They are particularly recommended for their aesthetic qualities. Actors, actresses and those who have to appear in public often do not like to be seen with glasses and for them the invisible spectacles make a great appeal.

4,000 In Use

About 4,000 people in the United States are now using them. They are by no means new, because the idea of invisible spectacles was suggested by Haschel, the English astronomer, in 1827. He thought of them as having protective value. Then Mueller, a German optician, blew a glass for a patient who had a cancerous lid. It did duty [illegible] years, and proved that these glasses could be used without injury.

The present day contact lenses were introduced for a condition known as keratoconus, a thinning of the membrane of the eyeball which causes the cornea to protrude at the center. They used to be blown, because it was considered impossible to grind them on account of their thinness. When these blown lenses were used the oculist had to try 30 or 40 in order to get a pair that fitted. But about three years ago Carl Zeiss, the great optical instrument maker of Jena, was able to grind these lenses so that they can be accurately and properly fitted to any ocular defect.

Those who wear them say that they are perfectly comfortable and that they are not even aware of the glass being in the eyelid. Frequently they forget to take them out when they go to bed, and wear them all night.

The danger of breakage is slight. There never has been a report of damage to an eye from fracture of the glass. They are made so resilient that the thin shells can be dropped on a desk top and they will bounce.

To Remove

To put them in the eye, the inverted shell is filled with salt solution and held on the top end of a little rubber suction tube, as one might hold an eye-cup. The head is lowered and the cup fitted into the eyelid. As the solt solution touches the eyeball there is a slight suction.

To remove them the process is reversed, the suction end of the rubber tube is placed against the glass and suction applied, and the glass drawn out.

When first used, they are worn for only an hour or two, but the wearer soon gets used to them and they can be worn indefinitely. They move with the movements of the eyeball, and are completely invisible.

Daily Horoscope

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Friday, Feb. 3

GREAT energy and initiative mark this day's doings, judging by major planetary operations, although this high-pressure attack may not always lead to the wished-for achievement. There is a menace of trickery, shrewdness and misconstrued writings or documents at the root of tangled transactions, which may be laid at the door of lawyers or other go-betweens. Watch these, change with prudence and due consideration, turn to agggressive action with determination and it is probable that a definite goal is within grasp.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves keyed to high activities in putting over important projects with much vim and determination plus well-constructed plans. But detrimental influences in connection with promotion or developing these propositions may be wrapped up with lawyers, agents or with misconstrued or distorted correspondence or documents. Be vigilant in this, make changes sagaciously and perhaps high-pressure tactics may win out.

A child born on this day may be capable, enterprising, audacious and disposed to tackle and create big things. Still, it may be unsettled and given to sudden changes and reversals, through the spirit of high adventure and bold initiative. It may have a conspicuous pioneer spirit.

DANGEROUS SERVICE

by GRACE ELLIOTT TAYLOR

The Characters

Peter Mallone: An adventurous young reporter.
Petronella: His loyal sister.
James Randall: Their childhood friend.

Yesterday: James tells Petrel he loves her.

CHAPTER 14

Peter Goes Wild

"I HAVE known, James," Petrel answered in a low voice. "I haven't wanted you to say anything, because, in a way, there is something else. A career means nothing to me. Only Peter's career is important. All my life I've trailed along behind him. You know that. I think that's all I ask of life. To center my interest in the people I love. I'd like to make a home, James. I want to love you, but I can't. I'm tied."

"Tell me about him." Gently, he led her back to the car. They had left it at the entrance of the drive. Their footsteps shuffled softly on the red sand. The pine trees scent was strong, and the needles rustled.

"I've seen him only three times. Yet it is a kind of bondage. I don't believe he really thought much about me. But I've got to see him again, and find out." Petronella hesitated a moment. Then she told him. "You introduced me to him, James. Tony Lance. Remember?"

Turning, he stared down at her. "Tony Lance?"

He was shaken. The moment he heard that name, he knew. "You fool—this isn't a light-hearted affair she'll forget. Petrel and Tony! Of course; This is serious!" Aloud he said:

"I would go and do a silly thing like that!"

"I'm not particularly glad I met him either." James put an arm round her shoulder. He pulled her head to rest against the lapel of his suit.

"Go ahead, darling, tell me all about it."

Petronella awoke the next morning feeling happier about James. He loved her. He understood. He was going to wait a little while, until she felt certain that she could love him in return. She did not believe there was sufficient intensity in his feeling for her to make it an unfair agreement. She wanted to love him. Attraction, and friendship, were strong between them. Perhaps, in most ways, she was a little bit in love with him? But her spirit remained untouched.

"I don't want to come second, if there's a chance of counting first. I want you to be happy," he pointed out. "I've another year at Cambridge, before I can start working. We could only be unofficially engaged. There is plenty of time."

Time! This morning, with the memory of James' kisses, his massive niceness, Tony Lance seemed a long time ago, a long way away. He was in Mukden. Where was Mukden? She must look it up on her map. The Japanese were still advancing.

Dark Turbulence

On the Sunday after Christmas Petronella sat in the train. It was crowded with people returning to town after the holiday; Peter was standing. They had had a grand Christmas. One always did, at Ballfield. The snow, now lying everywhere, inches deep, in Sussex, had come just too late to complete the picture. That was the only fault she could find in the three days which had just passed.

But she was returning to her difficulties. She looked up at Peter. He was staring out of the carriage window, through a dark circle of glass which he had rubbed clear with his coat sleeve. He was unconscious of her scrutiny. His eyes did not seem to see the white countryside. They were filled with a dark turbulence, restless ideas. Oh, dear, what would he do next? He learned too fast. That was the trouble. By October, he had begun to slacken. He saw no purpose in rehearsing indefinitely; he craved production. Temporarily the excitement of canvassing for the election had sufficed him. Petrel had stood beside his soap box in Hyde Park. The more the crowd had heckled him, the better he had enjoyed it. She had felt as proud as if his efforts had swung the entire election, when they sat in the Earnshaw's charming London drawing-room listening to the results coming through, over the wireless, and knew that they were victorious.

He had worked passably, until the end of November. Then, that series of mysterious disappearances. Peter had been gone first for one, then for two consecutive nights. She had never discovered where he had been. But she had not agreed with James's simple explanation. Apart from rushing about with Gloria, and quarreling with Marigold, Peter had very little interest in women. Besides, she knew he had gone collarless and in his oldest clothes. She had been horribly afraid for him. She had believed that his absences had something to do with the Russian ship, lying in the Pool. But since he did not choose to tell her, she did not demand explanations. Once, she tried to follow him. He had dodged and evaded her in the crowds. Laughing, he had apologized to her for this afterwards.

December thought Petrel wretchedly, had been hell. Peter could chatter quite well enough, he insisted, in five languages. That was a darn sight more than a lot of foreign correspondents he'd met could do. Perhaps old Judson had spoiled his chance of promotion, by sending up a bad report to Rowdon. Anyway, there didn't look to be anything more exciting for Peter Mallone than an occasional suicide.

Thereafter, Peter had gone wild. He had taken to going out every night, drinking too much, skipping his work for pleasure. Petrel laid blame sometimes with Gloria, the actress, sometimes with two Burma friends, whose jobs had gone, owing to the depression, and who were cheerfully blowing their funds, before attempting the disheartening search for work at home, which they knew, grimly, lay ahead of them. Did it take brave men, or fools, to react that way to disaster, Petronella wondered.

She was terribly sorry for the cause of their wildness, but she wished they would not endanger Peter's career. She was sorrier still for Colin who had not yet arrived in England. Colin would not have anything to squander. Easy going, long established Mallers had failed completely, the second week in December. His family had had to cable him money for his pasasge home.

Peter and she were doing their best to have some kind of job waiting for him, when he landed. But, so far, they were unsuccessful.

There were a great many men wanting work in London.

In December, the telephone had awakened Petronella at one o'clock.

A voice said, "This is Bow Street Per-lice Station, calling."

Peter, driving the car he had once sold Gloria Gladson, and with that irresponsible young woman by his side, had hit an island near Piccadilly. He had been arrested for reckless driving. He possessed the lucky gift of sobering quickly, so that the charge indicated that he had been giving too little attention to his driving, and too much to Gloria. It did not include drunkenness.

The next shock had been the donkey race. Petronella was not told anything about this, until Colly arrived at the flat and fetched her.

Peter had organized a crazy derby with six starters. These had been hired from fruit and vegetable vendors, and were trotted docilely from Covent Garden. The race was timed to start at 2 a. m. The course was from Ludgate Hill to the end of Fleet Street.

"He didn't tell you because he was afraid you'd try to persuade him not to do it," Colly told her, apologetically.

Petronella grabbed a coat. "So I should. He's mad!"

They arrived just in time to see five dogged little animals, and five light-weight, hallooing young men, Peter leading, careen past Ludgate Circus. There were shouts of laughter, and a police whistle blowing. Petronella was too late to do anything but stand on the empty street, gazing helplessly after them, not knowing whether to laugh or cry. Spectators ran along recklessly, shouting encouragement.

Peter was again arrested.

But, mercifully none of the animals had broken legs, or suffered injury. The morning papers published Peter's photograph, nicknaming him "the mad reporter." It was treated as a joke. The magistrate who tried the six riders enjoyed his own caustic comments, and fined them two pounds a head. Now, when she thought about it, it seemed very funny. Peter looked down at her.

"Why are you heaving with silent laughter?"

"The donkey race!" They both laughed. Peter had been very sweet and penitent since it happened. Otherwise, she doubted if she would be returning to town with him. She had finished her training. She was waiting for a job. The News had no vacancies on their secretarial staff, at present. She was going into the "Twilight Insurance Company." She had come near to quarreling seriously with Peter about the race, to feeling, helplessly, that he was beyond her control. If Rowdon, and Jodson, had not laughed at the exploit the consequences might have been serious. But Peter promised this phase was over. He would turn his energies into worth while things, instead of stunts. If possible, he would offer himself for the Air Force Reserve, try to pass the eye test, and learn to fly. It was stagnation he hated, and could not stand.

Sundown Stories

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THE penguin chicks were now all out of their shells. They were looking at a strange brand-new world, even though it was only a little section of Puddle Muddle and they were still remaining in their nests. They were eating and their little tummies were becoming quite plump.

From time to time the Puddle Muddlers went to look at them, but not too often as Willy Nilly said the parents should be allowed to have quiet for their babies so they would become strong in a short time.

"You'll need me for a long time to come," Mrs. Johnny Penguin whispered to her chicks. "Some little ones grow up so quickly but you will want to be with us for months and months. Even when you're strong and big you'll want the love we can give you—you'll want to walk along by us and snuggle up close to our feathers."

The chicks made cheeping sounds and Mrs. Johnny said:

"I know you understand all I say to you. There is so much you'll have to learn—how to go into the water and so much else besides."

On and on she talked to them, and then Mr. Johnny Penguin watched over them and talked to them.

"What are you going to name them?" Willy Nilly asked.

"I think I'll name one Downy," said Mrs. Johnny.

"And we might call the other Fluffy. They will keep soft down on their bodies for some time," said Mrs. Johnny Penguin. "And when they become older we'll call them both Johnny, keeping the family name."

LIGHT DEALINGS MINIMIZE RALLY

Many Traders 'Sit Tight' In View Of Unrest Abroad

By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—The stock market enjoyed some success in promoting a rally today, but lightness of dealings tended to minimize the recovery trend.

While tension over Europe's squabbles seemed to have lessened a bit, many traders again inclined to "sit tight" in view of the still confusing overseas picture.

Bonds did better all around and commodities were slightly mixed. Most foreign markets were narrowly improved.

Stocks receiving support on the domestic front included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Republic Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, U. S. Rubber, Consolidated Edison, North American, Columbia Gas, Glenn Martin, Sperry, N. Y. Central, General Electric and Union Carbide.

Reports of expanding orders for rails and construction products in addition to possibly larger rearmament purchases, did much to bolster steels.

Boardrooms found some comfort in trade forecasts that wholesale activities soon should resume the upturn which was pronounced in December.

Those watching building material shares noted the figures of the Engineering News-Record which indicated this week's construction awards topped the previous week by 19 percent but were 17 percent below the same 1938 week.

The February review of the National City Bank of New York said "the cumulative forces of the trade cycle" in the United States should be toward recovery.

$1,000 DAMAGE SEEN IN WELLSVILLE FIRE

Fire believed to have been started by defective electric light wiring, caused damage estimated at $1,000 to the three-story 10-room house occupied by the Clarence and Paul Watson families in Henry and Buckeye aves., Wellsville, Wednesday at 2 p. m.

The fire spread up the walls into the roof before firemen arrived. Firemen battled the flames for about two hours with four lines of hose before it was extinguished Most of the household furnishings were carried to safety.

The house is owned by the Perpetual Savings & Loan association and the loss is covered by insurance.

The Wellsville fire loss during the month of January reached $14,595, with insurance amounting to $28,500, carried on the properties involved. Nine alarms were answered.

The house ways and means committee went into suggestions for broadening the social security program and providing larger pensions for the aged.

The house military and naval committees were busy with portions of the $552,000,000 defense program. This program was discussed by the senate yesterday in connection with the heated controversy over proposed sale of American-made warplanes to France.

The senate itself had only minor bills up for action. Democratic leader Barkley said he had no plans for action on the appointment of Floyd H. Roberts as a federal judge in Virginia. The judiciary committee yesterday recommended rejection of the appointment, vigorously opposed by Virginia's two Democratic senators, Glass and Byrd.

NYA OPENS PALESTINE PLAYGROUND ON FEB. 8

Robert Bloor, county supervisor for the National Youth administration, today announced that work would start Feb. 8 on a project to set up a recreational center for East Palestine on the old fairground property.

The NYA will furnish labor, 20 youths between the ages of 18 and 24 at an estimated cost of $506 a month for six months. The city will furnish all materials, which Mr. Bloor said were estimated at $15,000.

The center will include tennis courts, softball and baseball diamonds, picnic grounds, comfort stations, a running track and horseshoe courts. The work will be under the direction of the city and the project will be under supervision of Mr. Bloor.

The project was approved in December by S. Burns Weston, state director, and the state project approval committee.

LOCAL GASOLINE PRICE REDUCED TO 16 CENTS

Gasoline prices dropped to 16 cents a gallon generally in East Liverpool this week after the Standard Oil Co. took the lead in the reduction from 17½ cents Monday.

All dealers in the city were said to be cooperating in the price drop. Several stated that there was no price war and that none was contemplated, but that the reduction was probably due to large surpluses of crude and refined products on distributors' hands.

This is the second reduction in this area in recent months. The price before was 18 cents a gallon.

80 At Social Hygiene Program

DR. JOHN A. MURPHY, former city health officer, declared that syphilis was curable and could be stamped out by early treatment and educational programs before a crowd of more than 80 in the Mary Patterson memorial Wednesday night.

The meeting was sponsored by the City Federated Women's clubs health division and was in observance of national social hygiene day. In addition to his talk, Dr. Murphy showed motion pictures on the campaign against the disease.

Dr. Murphy, who replaced Dr. C. H. Bailey on the program, pointed out that the taboo against discussion of "the king of killers" had been removed as the people of the nation prepared to stamp it out, and compared the fight with those against yellow fever, typhoid, diphtheria and tuberculosis.

The motion pictures traced the history of these famous wars on disease and pointed out that since the disease was curable, it could be wiped out in America. They also depicted cures of the disease and showed many prominent citizens who expressed their views on the campaign.

The meeting was arranged by Mrs. J. Donald Thompson, chairman of the health division of the middle eastern district of the Federated Women's clubs of Ohio. An estimated 5,000 similar meetings were held throughout the nation Wednesday in observance of the day.

PRESIDENT

during yesterday's argument there was no truth in intimations that foreign sales would retard development of the army air corps to its proposed 5,500 planes.

He declared that plants in this country had sufficient capacity to take care of army needs and to fill foreign orders.

"If the record of the senate military affairs committee could be made public," retored Sen. Clark (D) of Missouri, "I would be very glad to completely explode that theory."

Clark, pressing for publication of most of the record of the committee's inquiry into the projected plane sales to France, was promised united support in this move by the Republican committeemen, Senators Austin, Nye of North Dakota, Holman of Oregon, Gurney of South Dakota and Bridges of New Hampshire.

Favor Selling To Neutrals

The Republicans announced that they favored a policy of selling war supplies to all countries that are truly neutral.

By implication, they expected Japan, although the neutrality act has not been invoked in the Sino-Japanese struggle. Plane manufacturers voluntarily stopped sales to Japan last summer at Secretary Hull's request.

The President told the committee frankly, members said, after Tuesday's meeting, that this country intended to help the democracies of Europe build up their defenses against threats of totalitarian aggression by selling them war planes and supplies.

He also was said to have made it plain that the administration intended the European democracies should have all the advantages of the latest developments here in planes, rather than having to take models which the army had put in use a year previously.

Judges Uphold Stark In Cronin Estate Suit

The state supreme court in a ruling today refused to upset the administration of the estate of the late Daniel Cronin, Minerva pottery manufacturer, by the Stark county probate court.

Lamoine Handley, Carroll county prosecutor, sought to have the estate probated in the Carroll county courts, charging that while most of Cronin's business interests were in Stark county, he was a legal resident of Carroll county. The administration of the estate in Carroll county would entitle this county to share in the inheritance taxes.

In refusing to take the job away from the Stark county probate court, the supreme court held that the Carroll county prosecutor had "other legal remedies."

Riverviews Drop 5th Straight As Hyatt Big Five Wins 53-46

With Art Hyatt leading the way, the Hyatt Big Five of Pittsburgh handed the Riverview Florists their fifth straight loss, 53 to 46, Wednesday night at the high school.

The versatile former Schenley High school ace clicked from all parts of the court to sink 11 field goals and one foul, a top individual performance for Riverview opponents this season.

Art opened the scoring in the first two minutes to put the Pennsylvanians in the lead which they held until the second quarter when Jack Sterling put the locals in front with a field goal, 13 to 11. The visitors continued to trail until the last two minutes of the frame when Art led a spurt that put them in front 22 to 19 at the half.

Fred Milanovich knotted the count at 28-all midway in the third and the lead changed no less than five times from then until the final gun sounded.

Despite the fact that Fred Crum and Joe Fabel were ruled out of Wednesday's game by the A.A.U. for playing with the Westinghouse Airbrakes, a strictly professional team, the Big Five played good ball with few of the bad passes that marked the Riverviews' performance. The locals performed best at the foul line, however, making eight of 10 attempts against two of 11 for the Hyatts.

Harold "Curly" Blatchford did best for the Riverviews with eight fielders and a foul. Sterling was next with five deuces and a pair of free throws. Bob Taylor was runner up for Big Five scoring laurels with six goals and a foul.

RED OFFICIALS SIGN ALL BUT 7 PLAYERS

By The Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 2 — With crossed fingers, officials of the Cincinnati Reds let it be known today that they had more ball players signed up for the season than any other major league team.

Only seven men have not yet favored the front office with the big letter full of signed contract. Everybody else is in and a couple already are on their way to Tampa. The latter include Lee Grissom, who gave formal notice last week that his ankle was "completely unsprained" again — recovered from the effects of a late-season accident last year.

The officials had no idea what had come over their charges. They admitted this docility, apparently epidemic throughout the majors, was unprecedented.

"Of course, we hardly ever have holdouts anyway," said one, "but look at the rest of the clubs. Everybody signing up without a peep about what they're worth."

Quite content, the officials perished the thought that the famine holdout crop this year was depriving the game of its usual pre-season ballyhoo.

"People like to read about the boys signing their contracts," was the view taken. "Just as much as they do about how this guy or that won't sign for peanuts."

The Reds still to be heard from are Lew Riggs, Billy Myers, Earle Cooke, Dutch Gehrman, Ray Davis, Whitey Moore, and Frenchy Bordagaray.

MC CARTHY CONFIDENT YANKS WILL WIN FOURTH STRAIGHT TITLE

Rates Indians, Tigers 'Tough' In '39 Season

Joe's High On New Rookies, Especially Gallagher

By SID FEDER
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Feb. 2—The "sylphlike" figure of Marse Joe McCarthy, down to a mere 186 pounds, ambled in from the banquet circuit today and made no bones about his calm confidence that the Yankees are a shoo-in for their fourth straight baseball championship.

If anything, Marse Joe feels his world champions are going to have less trouble and probably are going to be a considerably better ball club, with the newly-imported rookie strength, than that which waltzed away to titles in 1936, '37 and '38.

"Cleveland will be tougher," Joe said, "and Detroit should go good. Boston's question mark is young Tabor on third base, now that the Sox have traded Pinky Higgins. But I'm not kidding myself—I think the Yanks are the greatest ball club ever put together."

Joe Refuses Beer, Cheese

If you didn't know Marse Joe is manager of the Yanks, and, as such, has as much worry about his coffee and cakes as a Chicago-snow-shoveler had finding work this week, you'd think he was having a tough winter of it. His tummy, which used to be as prominent in the Yankee dugout as Red Ruffing's hair, is no more. The reducing secret, if you girls want to know, was a simple matter of passing whenever the beer was served.

It seems whenever Joe drank beer, his appetite was whetted as well as wetted. In that condition he was a sucker for cheese, lots of it. All of which put the poundage on with the greatest of ease.

"But I haven't touched a drink and I haven't touched cheese since last fall," he said today. "The result is I've lost 20 pounds."

Joe figures, as every manager does, his pitching will tell the story this season. That Yankee pitching is just about as good as you'll find in the league. Thinking it over, Marse Joe rubbed that big square Irish jaw of his and decided he'd string along with Ruffing, Gomez and Monte Pearson as the nub of his staff. Who wouldn't?

He Likes His Rookies

"Then we'll get a fourth starter out of Wes Ferrell, Oral Hildebrand and Spud Chandler," he explained.

McCarthy is particularly high on his rookies, and is definitely sold on Joe Gallagher, the walloping outfielder from Kansas City. Joe is a Buffalo boy. So is Marse Joe, and Marse Joe has a lot of pride in his home town.

"That Gallagher," he pointed out, "hits as long a ball as you'll find around, and that's the kind of ball we play. With Charley Keller up from Newark, well—the outfield won't be in such a tough shape."

With Joe DiMaggio and Tommy Henrich fixtures in center and right fields, it happens Gallagher and Keller will battle George Selkirk for the left field spot. Then with Buddy Rosar around to help Bill Dickey with the catching chores (who said he needed help?) and a half dozen rookie pitchers showing promise—well, Marse Joe probably can spend all spring worrying about his diet.

FOXX, VANDER MEER TO RECEIVE TROPHIES

MENTOR PRAISES COLUMBIA MILER

Borican Favored In Race At Madison Square Garden

By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2—Last Saturday after only three hours sleep, dusky John Borican broke an 11-year-old Boston Garden record for 1,000 yards in his first race on a banked track. This Saturday, after a good night's rest, he will run two-thirds of a mile on the New Millrose A. A. track at Madison Square Garden, and there's no telling what may happen.

The only prediction it's safe to make is that he probably will win—from a field that includes Gene Venzke, Leslie MacMitchell and Indiana's Mel Trutt. In fact Carl Merner, the Columbia coach, believes that in a very short time the track season's newest sensation will be winning everything he goes into, from a quarter-mile up to a mile.

"For my money he's the best runner in the country today," says Merner, who supervises Borican's workouts on the Columbia outdoor board track. "Look at his performances—2:12.6 for that 1,000 in Boston and on a poor track, 1:50 or better for the half mile, 47.3 for 400 meters, 14.8 for the 110-meter high hurdles. Besides that, in field events he's hit 23 feet 6 in the broad jump, 6 feet 2 in the high jump, 150 feet with the javelin and 126 with the discus. The boy would win points for you in any event.

"And he's a picture runner. He combines Glenn Cunningham's power with Venzke's grace. He runs smoothly, easily, never gets tightened up, and yet has a terrific kick at the finish. Give him a few more races and he'll be out there raising cain with all the Cunninghams, Rideouts, San Romanis, Fenskes Munskis you can get together."

That's Borican's chief ambition—to run one really fine mile. The 25-year-old graduate student wants to prove to a doubting track world that there's nothing to the belief Negroes are constitutionally unfit to be distance runners.

Rankin Creates Fuss

EAST LANSING, Mich., Feb. 2.—Ralph H. Young, athletic director at Michigan State college, declined to comment today on reports he would protest to Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis against the signing of Glen Rankin, M.S.C. pitcher, by the Cleveland Indians. At Cleveland, Frank Kohlbecker, business manager of the Indians, said the boy quit school before a contract was discussed.

Fly Rule Rejected

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 2.—American association headquarters here announced today that the association chapter of baseball writers had rejected by a three to one margin the sacrifice fly rule which will be in effect in the majors in 1939. The rejected rule does not charge a hitter with time at bat if his flyout scores a runner.

Mat Scouts

Columbia Spies Out Yale Wrestlers; Rooney Says That Whizzer Refund Is Bunk; Fred Waring Receives Token; Texas Golfer Loses Temper, Scores

By EDDIE BRIETZ
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—Two future Columbia mat rivals sent scouts to watch the Yale-Columbia jousts the other night, which is one for this book . . . Prof. Artie McGovern has the right idea . . . Pictures show him beginning his career as trainer of the Dodgers by massaging the splinters out of their heads . . . Mike Jacobs intends to run fight shows in the Garden all summer to take care of the world's fair rush (he hopes) . . . Doff that derby to Billy Petrolle, the old "Fargo Express" and one of the best . . . He's one fighter who knew when to hang up his gloves and leave 'em there.

Correction: Art Rooney says that yarn about Whizzer White returning $6,000 of his $15,000 salary is pure bunk . . . Joe Jacobs flew in from Detroit last night to head the Max Schmeling welcoming delegation . . . "Evil Eye" Finkle, who goes about the country putting the old hex on fighters, will tell you how he does it via the airways next Thursday.

Fred Waring, the radio maestro, let down the bars recently and permitted the Marquette cagers to watch his crew rehearse . . . Today Fred received a brand new basketball autographed by every member of the squad . . . Natie Brown hit Detroit swearing he is not going into the tank for Toney Galento tomorrow night . . . Good . . . Schools all over the country have appropriated Jacksonville High's famous basketball song, "A Tisket, a Tasket, We Crave Another Basket" . . . Extra—Hamilton Junior High of Houston rang up 138 points the other night . . . Can anybody tie it?

The Philadelphia Evening Bulletin is exactly right — you can't blame Pop Warner for upheavals of nature such as Pitt, Villanova and that fellow Davey O'Brien . . . Alice Marble, the well known thrush, has doped it all out between encores at the Waldorf . . . Vines, she says, has such a flawless and orthodox style that it raises his opponent's play 25 percent . . . On the other hand, Budge's technique is just unorthodox enough to cut 25 percent off his opponent's efficiency . . . Which may account for the standing of the clubs in the pro league.

Dick Freman prints it in the Houston Chronicle, so it must be so . . . A member of a foursome at Hermann Park was about 120 yards from the green on the 15th hole . . . He sliced badly . . . The ball hit the trunk of a tree and bounced back at the golfer . . . Enraged, the gent swung at the ball, connected squarely in mid air and believe it or not, the ball sailed down the fairway, onto the green and—into the hole . . . And with that one school is positively out.

BASEBALL STARS TEE IN QUALIFYING MATCH

By The Associated Press.

LAKELAND, Fla., Feb. 2 — An aggregation of major league stars such as seldom gets together off the diamond started firing here today in qualifying tests of the annual Baseball Players golf tournament.

A score or more players who put as much punch behind a drive as they do in lifting one over the fence set out to try for a berth in the championship flight and a shot at Paul (Big Poison) Waner, the Pittsburgh Pirate outfielder who won last year.

Two 18-hole qualifying rounds were scheduled today. Match play will start tomorrow with the first 16 assigned places in the title flight.

Waner, rated one of the best linksmen among the baseballers, was a strong favorite to repeat, but in his path stood such formidable opponents as Wes Ferrell, the New York Yankee pitcher who won the inaugural tournament at Sarasota in 1936; Jack Russell, Chicago Cubs moundsman, and Heinie Manush, Brooklyn outfielder.

Also in the running were Joe Medwick of the St. Louis Cardinals; Nick Altrock, Washington coach and funny man; Gerald Walker and Luke Appling of the Chicago White Sox; Paul Derringer, Cincinnati moundsman; Bill Swift and Truett Seawell, Pittsburgh hurlers; Al Lopez, Boston Bees catcher, and Roy Collenbine, Detroit outfielder.
